Reorganization generates

A SPECTRUM OF CHANGE

The day August 25 which had loomed over the heads of students all summer had arrived. Walking through the halls brought back all of the familiar sights and sounds associated with the first day of school: slamming lockers, laughing, yelling, suntans, skateboards, lost freshmen . . . Wait a minute! Skateboards? Lost freshmen? What were they doing in the halls of a high school? These were only two of the many signs showing that the long talked about district reorganization was finally here. It was obvious that the changes would quickly envelope South in a wider spectrum of life.

The need for reorganizing the district first arose several years ago as declining enrollment became the trend in the area. The first step was to close various elementary schools. As enrollment continued to drop, the board decided to close three junior high schools rather than more elementary schools, because of strong feelings towards keeping the younger students relatively close to home. In addition to closing Broadmoor, Indian Creek, and Old Mission, the remaining junior highs became middle schools for seventh and eighth graders and the five high schools shifted to a four-year format, thus keeping the buildings near capacity.

Although some parents and students expected a smooth transition to be as probable as "cats and dogs living together," the year proceeded with little trouble. Gail Einbinder, sr., described the change, "The freshmen don't really affect me. Once I got used to all the people, it was no big deal." At the other end of the spectrum, the freshmen, having located such obscure parts of the school as the cafeteria, gym, and library, blended into high school life as well as could be expected. Ted Manvitz, fr., said, "I'm glad I'm at South this year because there is more freedom and academic choice." If reorganization was detrimental to any group, it was to the sophomore class. Although South was totally new to them, more energy was spent assisting in the freshmen's adaptation, and their needs were occasionally overlooked. However, Pam Harris, soph., pointed out the advantage of this, "Having freshmen this year has taken a lot of pressure off of us, I think we are less noticeable than sophomores in the past."

Spirit soars with added class

Both the new and the old contributed to enhancing the ever-growing spectrum of enthusiasm giving South a bright new look. In contrast to the declining enrollment, school spirit reached new levels. For the first time in the school's history, each grade met individually for class meetings. These assemblies helped promote a sense of spirit and rivalry between the classes. The agenda of the first meeting included a poster contest. Representatives of each organization within each class created huge posters for the kickoff of the football season and Coach Fred Merrell's debut. The administration chose an overall winner from the sixty entries. At the next pep assembly they revealed their choice and the senior class walked away with the honor, as the underclass presidents walked away with pies in their faces, compliments of Mike Brandt, senior class president. Energy remained high throughout the year as the Class of '87 left the school echoing with chants of "S-s-sen, i-i-ior, Sen-ior, SENIORS, SENIORS, SENIORS!"

Adjusting to a new crowd

The past year highlighted many changes and controversies both related and unrelated to reorganization.

The juniors and seniors found themselves having to reset their biological clocks which had magically been getting them out of bed and into first hour promptly at 7:45 a.m. The cause for such a drastic action was a five minute shift in the schedule, making the new hours 7:40 a.m. – 2:40 p.m.

Even with the earlier start, some students continued to look for relaxation before school. Throughout the year, the hall just outside Mr. Dick Dawson's room blossomed with the activity of a "tailgate breakfast, without the cars." People played music, ate, sang and even blew wonder bubbles while reclining in lounge chairs. Becky Ellis, sr., described it, "Although it forced us to roll out of bed a little earlier than usual, tailgate breakfast allowed us to release a little of the pressure that accompanies senior year."

After adjusting to the new time, another dilemma sent many students back into shock. They continually encountered unprecedented long lines of vehicles awaiting entrance to the main parking lot. Thirty-nine additional spaces in the new painted lot and a careful check of permits were not enough to relieve the congestion, as each day many juniors and seniors were forced to park in the dreaded sophomore lot.

THE SIGN SAYS it all as "the park" is no longer a designated smoking area.

The back up was caused by the additional cars dropping off the freshmen, the increased unloading time for the previously empty, now full school buses, and the nearly 900 cars competing for the 535 available spaces.

Because similar congestion was expected in the cafeteria, the traditional lunch policy was altered to accommodate the new crowd. Anyone who received permission from their parents was entitled to "open lunch." The lunchroom however, remained a popular place for students in all grades as it provided reasonable prices and because KSMS radio was back with more force and popular music than ever before.

Perhaps the most played-up controversy of the year was the closing of the designated smoking area, more commonly known as "the park." The annual issue of legalizing the park failed to reach the district board after it received a tie vote at the advisory board level. Despite the risks, some students continued to go outside between classes for a quick smoke.

Throughout the year changes, controversies, challenges, and ideas new and old all provided everyone with memories to remind them of 1987, the year South was enveloped in a wider spectrum.

SOUTH STUDENTS SHOW how hip they can be.

Gray, brown, and peach. Fashion. The colors were old, the looks were new. Faded, torn, tie-dyed. Diversity. Pushing it to the maximum and reaching new limits. Looks that were too hot. Lacy collars and denim, leggings and miniskirts. Creating a look all for the fun of it.

Accessories were very silver, very cool. Peace symbols, turquoise and onyx. Too chic for words.

"LET'S BLOW THIS POPSICLE STAND!"

Or Can't You?

. . . parties, football, soccer, or basketball games, movies, haunted housing, an evening at All–State, shopping, ice skating at the Crown Center Ice Terrace, concerts, 'boarding, fine and not–so–fine dining, bowling . . .

Such was the veritable potpourri of things to do and places to go for a student when educators let loose their strangling grip. However, getting from point A to point B involved two things often taken for granted—a car and a driver's license.

For 454 students, the lack of a car or license was acutely painful. Freshmen tried to retain some dignity by bumming rides from older friends or siblings, or creating their own modes of transportation, ie: the skateboard. If wheels were unobtainable, Jason Prier, fr., explained, "We go somewhere walking distance away, or else we'd have to sit at home. And nobody wants to do that."

Then the inevitable happened. "Terri–fied beyond rational thought", you barely passed your driving examination and received the ticket to freedom. "But what? No car until I prove myself responsible?"

All of the excitement decreased during your junior year, and you soon discovered that cars are expensive. Gas, repairs, tickets . . . by your senior year you were reduced to petty squabbles or full blown wars about whose turn it was to drive.

For most students, the problem of getting where you wanted to go, when you wanted to go was solved with a bit of effort. Underclassmen tried to save face by not depending on Mom and Dad, while the upperclassman struggled to keep the gas indicator from hitting "E", without putting a major dent in their paycheck. The freedom of driving included being able to go when and where you felt like it. Or can't you? Some problems are yet to be solved.

Pop, punk, Schlock, rock, jazz, new wave, old wave ... Old wave? What's this 'old wave' business?

Old wave is big business. First aimed at the yuppie listener, stations like KCFX 101FM took off. ZZ99 eventually followed the format. Soon it seemed like everyone was humming along with their parents to tunes like, "Earth Angel," "Twist and Shout" and "Stand by Me."

The new passion for the past bolstered the popularity of old faces releasing new material. Paul Simon, Peter Gabriel, Boston, cult heroes—the Monkees, Paul McCartney and Steve Winwood's latest creative endeavors reflected a fresh approach to the 80's; an attempt to wrap their creative genius around the age of synthetic music.

Inductees to the "Household Name" status were: The Fabulous Thunderbirds, Glass Tiger, Simply Red, the Smiths, Berlin and KC's own Rainmakers (formerly Steve, Bob and Rich).

Some of the highs and lows (the distinction between the two is often a very grey area) of the past year included:

The debut of Don Johnson as a rock 'n' roll star.

Prince's MIA status after the complete critical and financial failure of his second film, "Under the Cherry Moon."

Madonna's film also bombed but she was redeemed with the success of her third album, "True Blue."

Huey Lewis and the News scored a "Fore!" out of five with their new album.

U2, Sting, Bryan Adams, Lou Reed and Peter Gabriel insured Amnesty International of a high profile with a SRO benefit tour.

The bust of Boy George for possession of heroin.

The attitude that seemed to characterize the year was a popular appreciation of the "oldies." The record buying public and music making factions were forced to question whether or not they had to compromise the quality of music in the face of technology today.

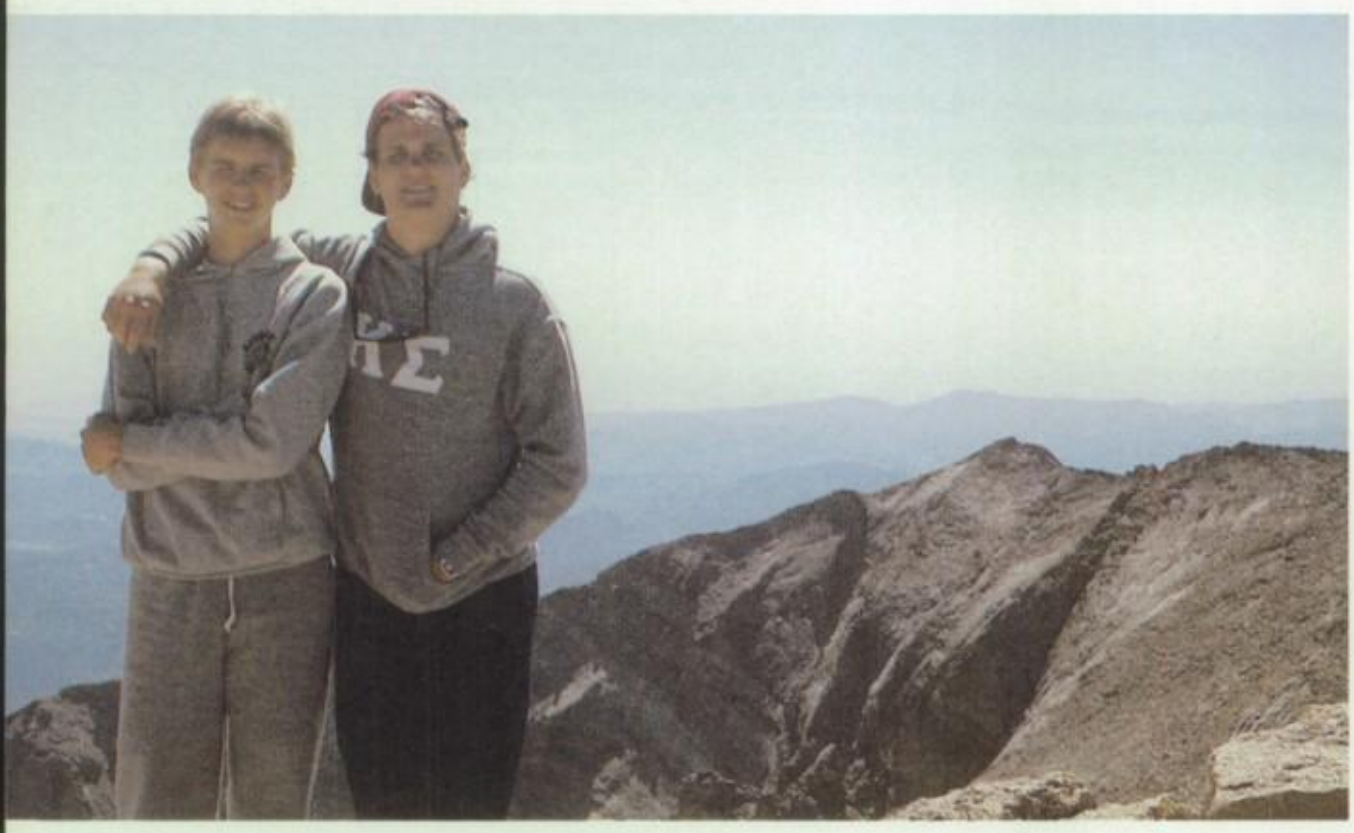
Holland

"My friend and I went with a group called Tennis Europe. We were on the Winchester Team. I played in a lot of tournaments, but I didn't win any—the courts are so different. For three and a half weeks I travelled through England, Holland and Germany, staying with families. I liked Holland and Germany, staying with families. I liked Holland best; the people there were nice to Americans."—Lesley Lewis, fr.

England

"I lived with a family on an exchange program in the county of Devon for a month. They took me everywhere. We went to London, where this picture was taken. I was really surprised that the punks didn't shock me. They really are pretty normal. They hold down regular jobs for the most part. Nobody there makes a big deal about them. I stopped and asked if I could take a picture of these two and they said yes, which is really unusual because they don't like having people bothering them for pictures. The punks here are nothing like the ones in London. They do things to themselves that would probably get you arrested here."—Nancy Frederick, sr.



Colorado

"Every summer my family goes to Estes Park. We love to hike. My brother and I always hike together because he's in college now and we hardly ever see each other. When we're hiking is about the only time I really get to talk to him. The best thing about Colorado is the mountains where it's really cool and there's no humidity. It's the perfect place to get away from ol' K.C."—Doug Sumey, jr.

COMING HOME

The smiles on the Homecoming candidates faces and the cheers from the crowd overshadowed the fact that it was rainy, windy, and bitterly cold. South had lost the football game, 0-13, to Blue Valley, as well. But despite the adversity, the game had a high attendance as old faces mingled with the new. Brian Yake, jr., said, "It was a spirited occasion, and everyone seemed to come together; of course it was probably because they were trying to stay warm!"

Enthusiasm for the event was built by the Student Congress sponsored Spirit Week. The week included such memorable days as Blue Valley Hick Day and Nerd Day, and culminated in a post game bash. "A lot of people were dancing and having a good time. It was really successful," said Amy Krumme, sr., STUCO Publicity Committee chairman.

JoAnne Ingram and Randy Kort, srs., were crowned Homecoming Queen and King. Ingram summed up her feelings by saying that she and Kort "were excited and surprised at the same time!" when they first heard the announcement that they had won.

Amy Lester and Al Jones, srs., had the distinction of being first attendants. Tracy DeMoss and Mike Brandt, srs., were crowned second attendants.

One candidate concluded after the ceremonies that it was "rough" having to compete against friends, but that it was an honor to be nominated. And as family and friends filed out of the stadium, most agreed that Homecoming was once again, a successful and memorable occasion.

THE HOMECOMING CANDIDATES are Mark Kahler, Marty Miller, Terry Cunningham, Randy Kort, John Jacobs, Mike Brandt, Randy Flagler, Amy Lester, Tracey DeMoss, Susie Woods, JoAnne Ingram, Karyn Scott, Lori Gieringer, and Julie Axland.

It was the same story Friday and Saturday; not a ticket was to be had on those nights for this year's fall play The Diviners. The overwhelming response to The Diviners prompted Mark Swezey to remark that this has been the best fall play production in the last three years.

While the audience sat in a three quarters round theater on the auditorium stage, the play unfolded in many layers; the main being Buddy Layman's search for his dead mother.

rain and find water far beneath the earth's surface.

Buddy's search for his mother is not the only divining or "truth finding" in the play. C.C. Showers, Buddy's friend and ex-preacher, tries to find happiness beyond the Gospel, while the townspeople, desperate for the Gospel try to find happiness in the preacher.

What made this play unusual was the startling, unconscious effect it had on its audience. "Although the scenes did not seem cohesive,—there was no natural progression," Stacy Hinthron, sr., explained, "The final scene is extremely climactic." Indeed, the death of Buddy Layman was profound; the effect was not of sorrow, but of joy. For the audience knew, that while facing death in the icy cold waters, Buddy Layman found his ultimate divination, his mother.

Puzzlin' Evidence

"We've got the power and the glory—and the money to buy it." —Talking Heads

The American people were outraged, Arms had been sold to Iran; a nation that not only harbors terrorists, but condones their activities. President Reagan stretched the powers of the oval office in what was claimed to be an attempt to exchange arms for three American hostages, and to improve relations with moderates in Iran. When the news hit the press President Reagan denied that he had approved any arms sales. It was later revealed that Reagan had OK'd and had possibly initiated the sale.

Yet the plot thickens. It was discovered that the arms money was transferred into a Swiss Bank account and used to transport arms to the Contras in Nicaragua. Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North, a member of the National Security Council, was supposedly at the head of this operation. North never received or asked for governmental approval. North, and Robert McFarlane, a presidential emmisary, the only two men who allegedly knew all of the facts, would not disclose details and pleaded the fifth amendment. McFarlane attempted to commit suicide prior to the date that he was to appear before Congress. This rash act raised many questions as to how scandalous the Iranscam affair really was.

The Senate investigation committee looked into the matter, but it would take many depositions and much time until the American public knew where to place the blame for this national embarrassment.

Racial Tensions Flare

Racism was on the rise in the United States. Eleven youths were indicted in a racially motivated attack in the Howard Beach area of Queens, N.Y. The eleven youths beat up three black men, one of whom died under a passing car as he tried to escape. Howard Beach has become a battle cry for racial attacks and protests all over the country.

In Forsyth County, Georgia 20,000 demonstrators marched through the small town of Cummings to protest the racism practiced there. The protestors chanted, "Hey, hey, ho, ho KKK has got to go!" Local clansmen also came out to exercise their rights. It was one of the largest demonstrations in the deep south since the sixties.

The number of racist attacks all over the U.S., which is not all inclusive, has increased from 99 in 1980 to 276 in 1986. A record 72,000 complaints of discrimination were filed with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission last year. Yet, looking back into history it is apparent that we have come a long way since the days when racial attacks occurred daily.

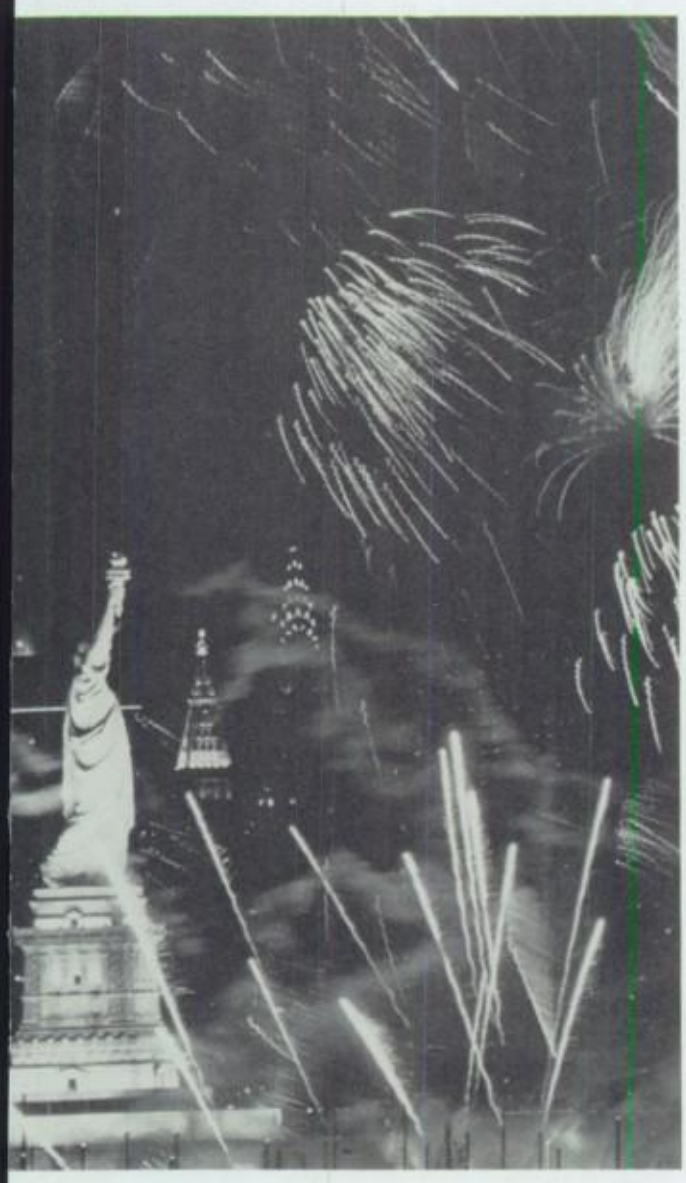
Lady Liberty

"The celebration of the Statue of Liberty reminded us of what we often take for granted—our freedom."
Bob Bettis, sr.



The Statue of Liberty, a symbol of freedom, beckoning the "tired . . . weary . . . and poor" to partake in the American Way of Life, celebrated her 100th birthday on July 4, 1986. Americans glorified her and they redefined the word "excess" as only Americans know how.

The events before, during, and after the relighting of the torch were a grand spectacle to behold. Twenty thousand smaller ships crowded New York Harbor to watch 22 tall ships, representing 19 countries sail into the harbor and pay their respects. President Reagan spoke, extolling the virtues of various prominant naturalized citizens.

The finale was the greatest display of fireworks ever known to man. Three million dollars worth of fireworks, 20 tons, were computerized to shoot off in time with the John Phillips Sousa band. The result was a half an hour of glorious color, patriotism, and a fitting finale for the Lady.

Miss Liberty stands proud amongst gala fireworks.

Students Speak out!

This year students had an abundance of issues to speak out about. Students voiced their opinions about everything from the smoking "park" to snow removal in the parking lots. Take a look as South students speak out.

FIDDLER on the Roof

"Because of the traditions, we've kept our balance for many, many years . . . Tradition. Without our traditions, our lives would be as shaky as . . . as a fiddler on the roof!"—Tevye

By Shanna Foster

Fiddler of the Roof is one of the most enduring musicals of all time. Seen by more than 30 million people worldwide, its theme of 'Tradition' hits home with viewers from Tokyo to Tel Aviv. This year, the Fine Arts Department brought "the good people of Anatevka" to South to share the warmth and cheer of this "traditional" musical.

The preservation of customs and beliefs is a common struggle in every culture. To Tevye, a poor milkman from Anatevka, Russia, the preservation of the matchmaking and marriage rituals is of utmost importance. He finds himself struggling with the influences of the world around him and three daughters who are willing to embrace new ideas. Things must eventually change, he finds, although much too soon, as the Russian Revolution decends upon their town and Tevye's family flees to America.

Mark Swezey, the director, faced changes, as well. Traditionally, teachers in the building worked with him for the musical. However, time commitments and reorganizational changes forced Swezey to look beyond South to find a vocal director and choreographer. His final choices were: Jeff Martin, vocal director, veteran of several Kansas City productions, including Theater in the Park, and Anne Pinkerton, choreographer, a former South student who choreographed South's musical two years ago.

Another aspect of change was the inclusion of freshmen to the cast. This created no animosity, for not only were the underclassmen "first-timers", two major roles and several smaller roles were played by juniors and seniors who had previously not been involved with any musicals at South.

Change can be beneficial, as many involved will claim. But the traditional aspects must be kept; without them, a musical would be "as shaky as a fiddler on a roof!"

Drug Programs Raise Doubts

Substance abuse awareness, on the forefront of American consciousness, finally hit home. With the high profile of two drug programs came questions and controversy.

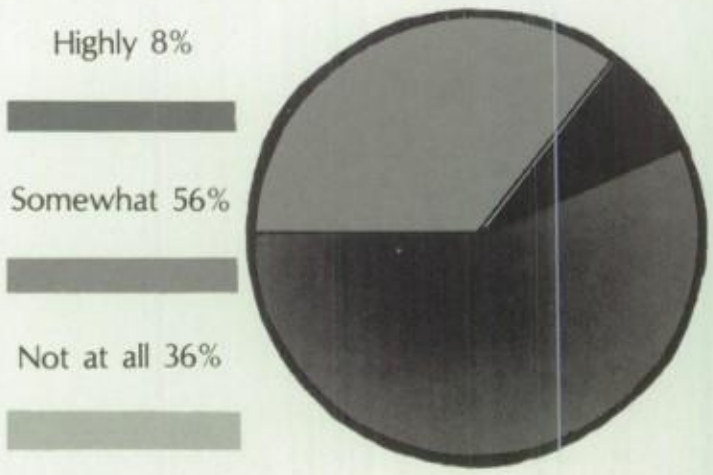
Why, after 20 years of hiding, did upper middle class Johnson County decide to come out of the closet and deal with the problem? "The whole drug enlightenment period we're going through is part of an extensive national sweep toward conservitism. Basically, because it's fashionable," claims Brad Williamson, sr.

Our school has two means of "enlightenment"; the first being SADD (Students Against Drunk Driving), who had a chapter here for the first time.

The second consisted of a drug rehabilitation program. While some students denounced the program, claiming it treated them like addicts or criminals, others will say it has helped them, as in the case of Sean Hosford, jr., "They taught us the different stages of dependancy and we had peer talk groups. It made me take a step back and look at what I was doing."

Did coaches make any exceptions to their "star" players when faced with a tough game? "No," says Hosford. "The coaching staff on the soccer team made me sit out of two very important games. But as much as I wanted to play or they wanted to play me, they didn't think twice about not sending me in."

"I think it's fair; I did get caught, but I've learned a lot."



How effective do you feel the drug awareness programs have been?

Q:

Why do you think that the '86-'87 school year started out with a lot more spirit than there has been at the beginning of recent years?

A:

"Because the festive attitude of the juniors has taken over."
—Jeff Robbins, jr.

"There is a lot more class rivalry."
—Julie VanDerTuuk, jr.

"The seniors had to show the new kids what Shawnee Mission South school spirit is all about."
—Dan Rabbitt, sr.

"The cafeteria string beans tasted better."
—Randy Flagler, sr.

"We made more progress in two days than we have in four years," said one US official of the talks in Reykjavik, Iceland. And yet, Reagan and Gorbachev only achieved a stalemate.

The meeting was originally set to discuss a trip to the US by Gorbachev, but when the Soviet leader proposed across-the-board reductions of nuclear arms and eventual elimination of medium range missles in Europe, Reagan and his aids were taken by surprise. The price for all these drastic measures was a ban on testing and development of the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) for ten years.

To this, Reagan said no, claiming that SDI had forced the Soviets to the bargaining table.

However, most of Europe and many Americans disapproved of Reagan's view. In the US, three weeks after Reagan walked away empty-handed, the Democrats took control of the Senate.

Still, Reagan refused to back down, claiming the Soviet proposals are null and void if the USSR treats them as they have previous agreements. Gorbachev said of the Soviet position, "We will not withdraw our proposal."

AIDS Concerns Students

How well do you feel you understand the AIDS issue?

I am well informed.....40%

The facts confuse me, I wish I knew more 27%

I know what AIDS is, but that's about all 30%

I don't understand at all 3%

10% of the student body was polled with even distribution among the classes.

The invader is tiny, about one sixteen-thousandth the size of the head of a pin. However it does not go unnoticed, its results are deadly.

The Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) scare has swept the nation and students are wary of this disease. "The worst thing about AIDS is that it kills mostly young and previously healthy people," said Susie Woods, sr. Gail Eindbinder, sr., thinks, "AIDS is scary because if you need blood then you have a lot to be afraid of."

Now that AIDS has spread from the gay community to affect heterosexuals, the American public has to deal with many moral and ethical questions. There are no easy solutions to this problem. Jenny Barrick, jr., hopes, "that someone will find a cure soon!"

Q:

What do you think of the SADD program started this year at South?

A:

"Even though it has been established at SMS, I don't think that kids will stop drinking and driving." —Susan Howard, sr.

"It's a great idea to help expose people to the importance of drunk driving." —Brent Venneman, jr.

"It's too bad that the people SADD is aimed at couldn't care less about the group's efforts." —Brian Compton, soph.

"I'm all for it. You should not drink and drive. If you do, you may hit a bump and spill your drink." —David Nickerson, fr.

HERITAGE ROYALTY

Fourteen hour days fill the lives of super-achievers

By Rachel Rubin, Carol Kim and Shanna Foster

Certainly, when you look back on your high school years, you will remember the dreaded exams, the dull, required reading books, and the all-nighters spent writing term papers at the last minute. Sure, sometimes you stayed after school for an hour to attend a club meeting, and you believed that you were "involved". But what about the students who arrived at 7:15 am and left at 9:25 pm?

It was this type of student that Heritage Royalty recognized. Not only does a candidate exhibit exceptional dedication and talent in school activities, he or she has been awarded recognition for academic excellence as well.

To find these twenty superior students, two junior Heritage staff members selected forty exemplary boys and girls from the 600 senior summaries to submit to ten teachers and one administrator for evaluation. Voting on the candidates the faculty felt were the most well-rounded, reduced the list to ten boys and ten girls.

This year, before the ballots went to the senior class for a final vote, several mistakes were spotted in the candidates' senior summaries. This caused a one day delay. However the problems stemmed from the fact that seniors had to fill out their summaries in December. At that point, seniors couldn't always predict their spring activities. Therefore, intentional falsification in hopes of being a Heritage Royalty candidate, was probably not a motive. However, this situation led to many questions and doubts about the process of picking candidates. Many concede that the selection process must be re-evaluated to ensure fair competition and avoid embarrassment to any candidate.

When the dust finally settled, Randy Kort and Felicity Watson, srs., had the honor of becoming King and Queen. Rob Weiss and Jo Anne Ingram, srs., captured the first attendants position and Marty Miller and Jenny Barenberg, srs., won as second attendants. "Despite the problems," concluded Bill Olsen, sr., "I don't think that there was any doubt that the students that did win, deserved it."

Heritage Royalty are: Karen Arends, Jenny Barenberg, Mike Brandt, Kamela Crawford, Wendy Deering, Heather Hamtil, Stacy Hinthorn, JoAnne Ingram, John Jacobs, Carol Kim, Randy Kort, Barry Maupin, Marty Miller, Bill Olsen, Linda Overholser, David Walker, Felicity Watson, Rob Weiss, David Whinery, and Brad Williamson.

How To Survive High School

Three-way driving

A sharp mind, quick reflexes, and the finest defensive tactics. These things alone will not enable you to escape unscarred from the parking lot at rush hour.

The pedestrians pose a real problem. They are not your every day, run-of-the-mill pedestrians. No, they are kids who walk dangerously near souped up cars with mag wheels and tinted windows. They love a good accident and find it a challenge to try to cause one. These are pedestrians without fear.

Much of the congestion can be attributed to students who are practicing the art of conversation. Friends honk their horns at each other and try to maneuver their cars so that they can proceed to hold a lengthy conversation about their exciting day at school. Do these people have telephones?

Most rear-end collisions are caused by the simple, but deadly act of bumper sticker reading. After a long day of classes, students are eager to learn how to save wildlife by throwing a party. Crazy, isn't it?

The parking lot. A frightening thought. The only place where one way traffic moves in three directions.

As we examine the question, "Where for lunch?", we must keep in mind the allotted 35 minute time span. The short amount of time, and the lack of a vehicle drew many students to the cafeteria.

Upperclassmen, sophomores and freshmen who were lucky enough to hitch a ride, formed a mass exodus from the school at lunchtime. They headed for the eating establishments that could dish up food in under ten minutes. (The record stands at 1.7 minutes. It was soup.) The stomach, in particular, did not enjoy this abuse.

Why then did students go out to lunch? The answer was simple. It was a spirit within that drove them onward in their quest to find the perfect lunch that not only satisfied their hunger, but also kept the Peptobismol bottle in the medicine cabinet where it belonged.

Beyond cool—

A 'way-rad' guide to hanging out

Throughout history many cultures and climes have encountered "hanging out". The Greeks turned it into the Olympics while the Romans enjoyed it so much they built huge ampitheatres to accommodate everyone. The dark and Middle Ages were a bleak period for hanging out, as the Church did not allow it. The Victorians did it in a closet and didn't tell anyone about it.

For obvious reasons, the modern rebirth of hanging out can be attributed to the Great Depression. Since then, hanging out has blossomed into an art form. In fact, many consider the Woodstock concerts to be the paragon of hanging out. Indeed, the 60's produced some of the world's greatest hanger-outers. Nowadays, hanging out is a common practice, even out in hallowed halls.

STUDENTS DEMONSTRATE HANG-out techniques.

For those of you who think you need some creative inspiration or brush up on your technique, we have devised some tips to help you along. Happy Hanging!

1. Don't hang out where you are likely to get hassled. It's better to hang out in peace.
2. Sing songs. (This doesn't mean bring your brother's band.)
3. Slouch. This is essential. Nobody will believe you're seriously hanging out unless you do.
4. Establish your own spot. This gives you both an identity and a place to come home to.
5. Avoid hang out "nomads". These people are searching for an identity as they wander from spot to spot, searching for food and drink and hanging out.
6. MOST IMPORTANTLY—Don't just sit there and take up space. Do something—people-watch, read, learn guitar, anything. Remember, bums are vagrant, you hang out.

A Spectrum of Activity

The wide variety of organizations provided us with the opportunity to receive much more than a textbook education. Of course we could just show up for school at 7:40 am each morning, go to first hour and then merely follow the bells until 2:40 pm at which time we go home, grab a couple of Twinkies and busy ourselves until the next day. However, such a schedule would inevitably produce an apathetic student body. Wisely, we have taken advantage of the activities and have grown from the commitment, leadership and co-operation which they require. Even the inconveniences of school activities added to our lives at South. By dragging ourselves to school early for a practice, staying late for a meeting or trying to convince someone that they really would benefit from buying three chocolate Santas, two candles and a sausage for a fundraiser, we have produced a spectrum of activity which enhanced our lives both at, and away from South.

With extra effort, service groups reach goal of

by Lisa Colombano

Service groups at South were ommited to helping not only at school, ut also in the community. Enthusiasm nd dedication were characteristic of the nany students in both the Show-Me-outh Club and Anchors.

Getting started in late summer, Show-Me-South members began planning their ctivities for the year. The main goal of he club was to help students new to the district become acquainted with the chool. Commenting on the club, Kathy MacNaughton, jr., said, "As a new stu-dent, I was shown around and made to eel welcome. The friendliness I was re-ceived with made me want to join the lub myself to help other new students.

The club was made up of volunteers, who met twice a week to discuss and plan future activities. They continued the radition of a yearly luncheon, which was prepared by the members. The luncheon was an opportunity for new students, eachers, and administrators in the district o come together. Another responsibility of the club was the hosting of "Come ook at South Night." President Felicia Wasson, sr., summed up the club by say-ng, "I think our group this year was fabu-ous. We had so many people who were eally interested and put a lot of effort into our activities."

Another service group, which helped not only the school, but also the community, was the Anchors. Anchor members promoted school spirit by making posters and banners encouraging both the football and basketball teams. Doing charity work, and helping the less fortunate was one purpose of the group. In November, they were able to help the needy by having a clothing drive where they helped sort and box clothes. In December they prepared a meal that was served to the poor at Saint Mary's Church of Kansas City. Anchor president Lisa Miller, sr., said, "Helping others and doing charity work was the main purpose of our group. The reward of serving people in need was well worth the time and effort we put into our projects."

"Doing work for my school and the community was a lot of fun, and at the same time very satisfying."

-Julie Bors, sr.

The Show-Me-South Club was sponsored by counselor Mr. Phil Larson. When asked why he started the club, Larson said, "I saw the need for an organization that would help new students become acquainted with the school as well as the curriculum." The Anchors were sponsored by Mr. John Seevers. Officers were elected to help in the organization of the group. The officers were: Lisa Miller, president; Suzanne Linsky, vice-president; Julie Bors, secretary; Kathy Williams, treasurer.

Although the activities of the two groups were different, the goal or function was basically the same. That goal was to help others in need. To reach their goal, a lot of time and effort was required on the part of the students involved. The hard work however paid off in the end, as many people benefited from the various services performed by these groups.

National Honor Society

Serves the Community

by Liz Parker

The search for academic achievers with leadership, character, dependability, honesty, attitude, and conbributions to school continued with the selection of this year's National Honor Society. NHS recognized and awarded students exhibiting academic excellence and high achievements. At the same time it responded to the needs of the community through volunteer functions.

Each member was required to participate in at least one community service project. Volunteers assisted in the Peter Marshall golf tournament, a used record sale for the Foundation for Anyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (Lou Gehrig disease), and sold honeybears to raise money for the Association of Retarded Citizens. Temporary Lodging for Children (TLC) was aided by a special committee of NHS members who organized personal and household items which were given to homeless children. Several NHS members participated in "Jail and Bail," a fundraiser for March of Dimes. Corporate Woods executives were jailed and had to raise money to post bail for their release.

"The National Honor Society was a great opportunity to give something back to the community." Phil Van Eyck, sr.

Each spring new members are received into the society based on teacher recommendations and personal achievements. The 1986-1987 initiates were required to obtain favorable ratings from ten academic teachers and at least one sponsor of a school activity, in addition to meeting the 3.55 grade point average requirement.

Mrs. Alta Whitehead, NHS sponsor, advised the officers in the coordination of the calendar of events and was present at the monthly meetings. The officers were: president, Jolie Bailey; vice-president, Liz Burge; secretary, Felicity Watson; and treasurer, Jenny Lowland.

Revival of Literary Magazine sparks one's Creative flair

by Lisa Colombano

Each year the literary magazine started out by reviewing the publication from the previous year. Weighing its pros and cons, the staff began devising ways to improve and enhance the publication. This year, however, was different. As no magazine was published the previous year, the staff had nothing to critique, and nothing to fall back on. The literary staff was forced to start from scratch.

Last year none had the desire to put the effort into organizing the production of the magazine, but this year there was a desire to revive the publication. Sparked by an interest in literature, writing, and the arts, Beth Gruenke, jr., started the development of the magazine. Gruenke said, "I knew the school did not have one, so I thought it would be worth it to try to get people interested and involved in putting one together."

Gruenke first approached her English teacher Mrs. Jane Long about sponsoring the activity. Editors were then chosen for each of the different sections. The editors were, Beth Gruenke, editor-in-chief; Hubert Liu, fiction; Mike Hurwitz, nonfiction; Sally DeFina, poetry; Jason Smith, photography and art; Peter Haxton, alumni; and Wendy Deering, faculty. After that, anyone was welcome to either join the group, or submit original writing or art work.

"The magazine got off to a slow start, but with increased promotion, we were able to get some good submissions, and put together a good publicaton.
Beth Gruenke, jr.

At the meetings, which were held usually once a week, the staff evaluated the submissions, and voted on whether or not to publish them. Laura Johnson, sr., said, "The meetings were fun, because they gave us a chance to read other people's poetry and stories." When asked about the benefits of the magazine Johnson commented that, "A lot of times people will write on their own but never show it to anyone. The magazine gives kids a chance to get their writings published and share it with others."

A contest was started to find a name for the magazine. But as no worthwhile names were suggested, the idea was brought about to have a "generic" literary magazine.

Although the magazine got off to a slow start, dedication and hard work on the part of the staff helped make it a publication the students could be proud of. Commenting on the magazine as a whole, Paul Min, sr., said, "Being seniors this year, we wanted to leave something behind to leave our mark on the school, and the literary magazine is it."

Students pursue trivial knowledge:

Categories

by Liz Parker

Categories. The quest for knowledge has long been a favorite pastime of mankind. "Categories is fun," says Gregg Hayes, sr. "It's for the intellectual sort," remarks Jennifer Hodes, sr. Heather Wood, sr., comments, "Categories is a fun waste of time."

Categories has definitely changed. Under the direction of Mrs. Vivian Cornwell, Categories sponsor at South, the team has grown in numbers and in strength. It became more of a social activity drawing people with a wide variety of interests and specialties. This variety was just what was needed because the team was required to respond to questions on history, math, literature, sports, science, music, art, entertainment, and geography.

Meets were held approximately once a month. South's team competed against the other Shawnee Mission schools, Olathe North and South, and Blue Valley North and South. Each meet was taped and aired on cable television. About a week before each competition, practices were held. Each member was encouraged to participate in the question and answer sessions. A five member team was chosen for the following meet at the end of each practice. This decision was based on the performance of the participants at the practices.

"Categories is an outlet for all the useless, trivial information I've accumulated over the years."

Heather Wood, sr.

Categories' success added to South's respectability and academic prestige. Its success and popularity were the results of the hard work and efforts of the team captain, Heather Wood, sr., assistant Mike Hurwitz, sr., and the widespread team spirit. For Paul Min, sr., "Categories was a way of life."

StuCo reaches out to serve the Community

by Liz Parker

"Every year has its own personality," insisted Mrs. Carolyn Simmons, StuCo advisor, "what is different about this year is that all four officers are working equally and closely with the rest of the StuCo." President Joanne Ingram, Vice President Randy Kort, Secretary Al Jones, and Treasurer Jenny Lowland certainly kept on top of things. They planned new activities and events and innovated the old ones, "making everything a little bit better," according to Joanne Ingram, sr.

Responding to the recent changeover from a three year to a four year high school, StuCo decided it was time to refashion its own program. Considerable effort was put forth to integrate the four classes and make South a four-year high school in spirit as well as in name. Great care was taken as StuCo endeavored to get the freshman and sophomore classes settled and feeling a part of the school. To aid this process, fourteen freshmen were added to the congress as representatives of their class's thoughts and opinions.

Much of StuCo's work went unrecognized by the student body. The four officers attended a national conference and workshop in Oklahoma City over the summer to learn about student governments and to refine their leadership abilities. They also reserved second hour each day to plan and do the paperwork involved in StuCo. Every two to three weeks, the officers met with the committee chairmen and the representatives from each class to make decisions and organize. Several times during the year the entire student congress attended a district-wide meeting to exchange ideas and make plans with other Shawnee Mission schools.

"In StuCo there is more energy expressed and spent for really wonderful causes than you see anywhere else in the school."

Mrs. Carolyn Simmons

Special events, services, fundraising, dances, publicity, student exchanges and elections were the focus of StuCo and a committee was assigned to each of these areas. Each committee was headed by a chairman and staffed by representatives from each class. Amy Krumme, sr., credited StuCo's success to the fact that "more parties and events were planned to get a variety of students involved." Felicia Wasson, sr., added that StuCo was definitely "more organized."

StuCo's activities and responsibilities varied greatly. Among them were the Homecoming, W.P.A., and Sweetheart dances, the publication of the student directory, the two blood drives, the organization of all elections and the charity drive, all contributing to a successful year.

Students from other nations add

Spice to South

by Gary Tsarovsky

Whether it was the culture of Israel or the school system of Australia, the people of Columbia or the art of Europe, students at South could learn about these and other points of interest without leaving the school. All they had to do was attend one of the monthly meetings of the International Club. At these meetings students who have visited other countries by means of various exchange programs gave accounts of their trips as well as answering questions about their experiences abroad.

Dating back to the early years at South, the members of International Club have worked hard helping not only to educate students about other countries, but to make the exchange students who come to South feel more at home. "International Club helps exchange students get to know the students at South as well as making it easier for them to learn about all the things that the school has to offer," commented Catherine O'Neill, jr. The exchange students took part in school's various extra-curricular activities, adding an international edge to the competitions.

Activities that were carried on by the club in order to better acquaint the international students with the customs and traditions of our country included a Halloween party, a trip to the Renaissance Festival and other activities that were also done through the host families with which the students stay. The monthly meeting also gave the exchange students a chance to talk about their countries with the rest of the club. Kellie Kalbac, sr., who visited Europe this past summer, said this about her presentation, "In it I tried to convey the differences an American would encounter when traveling through Europe."

"International Club tries to acquaint the exchange students with South, while introducing the students here to the different opportunities to go abroad."
Felicity Watson, sr.

All in all, the interest that was generated by the International Club was due to the fact that students at South were interested in other countries and the people that come here. Programs such as AFS, YFU, and NACEL enjoy a growing popularity with the students at this school because they bring the majority of exchange students that visit here. Bringing it all together, Kathy MacNaughton, jr., said, "International Club is a great place to meet people and learn about other countries."

The Marching Raiders

Band together

by Liz Parker

The marching band aimed to become better than the best under the leadership of Mr. Steve Adams, South's new band director. At the end of the 1986 school year, when the band was told they would have a new director, they were worried the band program wouldn't be the same, and afraid of the inevitable changes. "We went to band camp with mixed emotions," said Tyler Adkins, sr. If they went in unsure of their futures, they came out confident of success.

"We were worried that a new director wouldn't know or care about our past twenty years of tradition. We were lucky, very lucky, to get him (Adams). He went to South and he knows how we work," explained Mary Morris, sr. Mr. Adams, a 1979 graduate of South, returned to the band with new ideas and a knowledge of how the band operates.

It has been a custom of the marching band to have a corp of officers who hold most of the leadership and organizational responsibilities normally held by the director. This is a quality unique to the district. The officers were: Tim Doherty, sr., President; Ken Wink, sr., Vice President; Mary Morris, sr., Secretary and Treasurer; Jason Smith, jr., band manager; Laura Round, sr., historian; Maria Higgins, sr., drum major; Mike Drinane, jr., junior drum major.

"There's a lot of spirit and you're really proud of what you're doing." Maria Higgins, sr.

In an attempt to raise money for a planned tour to Europe, fundraisers continued throughout the year. Performances were scheduled for Germany, France and England in addition to three weeks of touring and sightseeing. The Band Boosters arranged the fundraisers, which included the sale of a Millionaire of Overland Park sponsored monopoly game and the annual cheese and sausage sale.

Freshmen were the largest addition to the band. They contributed numbers and volume, in addition to the quality of the band. "There is a lot of pressure put on the freshmen to do well, but they caught on completely to the tradition and excellence of the band," commented Chris Barrick, sr.

A wide variety of students were attracted to the people, music, and spirit of the band. Most members agreed with Mary Morris, sr., who said, "My friends are the band."

Ask any member the best thing about being in the "Rompin' Stompin' Raider Band" and they're sure to tell you 'We work like a family.' Janet Knutson explains, "We do everything together: Movies, parties, hayrides, and even mud fights."

Banner Year

District One rating paves the way for a

by Lisa Colombano

It was an early summer morning late in the month of June. Most people were sound asleep or just beginning to tumble out of bed. The Southettes however had been up and about for hours. To continue the traditional initiation, the second-year members kidnapped the first-year members.

Along with the annual activities of eating baby food, squiriting water guns, and spraying shaving cream, there was also a new twist. The kidnapping was originally planned to give the members a chance to get to know one another before camp, but the camp had been cancelled. On the one hand, the girls were disappointed, but it did mean the end of early morning practices. "Because we didn't get to go to camp, we had to work extra hard to perfect our routines. The time we spent together though helped us become closer as a team," said Kim Hay, jr.

Practices were not held again until after the beginning of the school year. Required to be at school each morning at 7 a.m., the flag team was able to work with the drill team and marching band. Practices on Thursday afternoons also helped the marching unit perform as one.

During football season the team performed with tall flags, not only at home games, but also in marching competitions at Wyandotte and Warrensburg. When asked about the competitions, senior Jacqui Gray said, "The good part is finding out you got a District One rating after waiting in the rain for two hours to perform in the mud." At school assemblies and at basketball games, the performances were done with small flags. Using small flags gave the girls a chance to mix dance steps with flag movements.

Being on flag team not only gives you the chance to make friends, but also to learn what it means to be part of a team.

—Karen Ayers, sr.

The flag team was sponsored by Mrs Billie Bauer, but five seniors were elected to share in some of the organizational work of the team. The officers were; Karen Ayers, captain; Tiffany Pettijohn, co-captain; Lisa Klaassen, secretary; Natali Rome, historian, and Mindy Morris, little sis organizer.

The team not only worked together during performances, but also came together outside of school. Before each game, a dinner was arranged by various members, and given at one of the girls' house. Gifts were also secretly exchanged between first and second year members.

Bringing together skills and a desire to be the best, the flag team was able to become a close-knit group working as one. Their performances provided support and excitement to the audiences, as well as the teams. Throughout every performance, spirit and pride were evident on each girl's face. This spirit was carried over to everyone who saw the Southettes perform.

Southlanders spark enthusiasm in Crowds

by Liz Parker

The Southlanders' spirit and enthusiasm were the newest addition to half-time performances. Their liveliness animated the courts at the girls' varsity and the boys' freshman and sophomore basketball games.

The idea for a freshman/sophomore drill team came up last spring and Miss Pat Teegarden, the Southlanders' sponsor, was chiefly responsible for its organization. To give more girls the opportunity to participate, Miss Teegarden selected a different team for each semester. As a result of this division, many members of the first semester were unsatisfied. They felt they were scheduled to perform at too few events and hoped that in following years, they would begin their shows earlier in the year.

Fourth hour, as well as Thursday mornings before school, was reserved for learning and practicing the many dance routines the girls were required to memorize. The Southlanders also attended Saturday dance clinics to obtain new ideas and integrate them with the old for creativity and variety.

"Southlanders was a lot of fun, but it takes a lot of work," Katie Heath, soph.

Before the Southlanders, there was no one to perform at these games. According to Jennifer Rozeboom, soph., "The fan attendance has increased," drawing more attention to the importance of these activities. Students became interested in the drill team for various reasons. Elaine Chien, soph., tried out because she "likes to dance," and many of the girls participated because they felt that it was a good chance to prepare for Pacesetter activities.

Set the Pace

Through hard work and dedication the Drill Team

by Gary Tsarovsky

Sitting on the edge of our seats, we anxiously awaited the performance of the Pacesetters. As the team danced, the crowd seemed pleased with the squad's abilities. The drill team made the dances look so easy, when in actuality the routines took hours upon hours to perfect.

Practices started early for the team. Beginning with a four day camp in Lawrence at the end of June, the Pacesetters started a season that required much hard work and dedication. At 7 a.m. every morning the team assembled on the JV football field to practice marching with the flag team and marching band. These practices continued through first hour which was designated for drill team to practice every day. Commenting on the early morning practices, Cheryl Stukenberg, sr., said "Without the morning practices, the shows wouldn't come together, and it is crucial to the team that we get in as much practice as possible in order for us to look our best."

The drill team's performances this year included the Overland Park Parade, the Shawnee Mission Marching Festival, the District One Marching Competition, and the Music Bowl in Warrensburg. The Pacesetters also performed at every home football and basketball game during half time, as well as performing at pep assemblies. According to Kim McCall, jr., "The performances were scary at first, but once you perform a few times and get used to it, it's a blast!" The highlight of the year for the team was the Extravaganza that they put on in May. For this show, the team chose a theme, prepared the music, picked out the costumes, and choreographed the dances for the production. Mrs. Debbie McEndarffer, the Pacesetter sponsor, helped a great deal with the show.

"Starting out as a group of individuals, the girls have learned to come together as a team, respect each other, and work with each other as one."
Amy Lester, sr.

Self-discipline, responsibility, cooperation, and creativity crated an atmosphere which allowed for an outstanding drill team to exist. An important value, essential for the team's growth as a unit that was taught to the members of the squad by McEndarffer, or Mrs. Mac as the girls called her, and by the older members of the team, was the ability to give, as well as take constructive criticism. McEndarffer, a former Pacesetter herse had a lot to offer the girls. She was aide by the drill team officers who were, Am Lester, captain; Karyn Scott, co-captai Julie Axland, social chairman; Am Overman, treasurer; Lori Gieringer, secr tary; and Cheryl Stukenberg, historian.

Although the team worked hard durir the year, they also planned things th brought them closer together. Ther were dinners before each performance, hayride in late fall, and an exchange gifts during the Christmas season, all mal ing it possible for the Pacesetters to enjo the exciting experience of being on th drill team. "Drill team was the best exper ence I've had at South, and I feel lucky t have been a part of it," said Dana Ryche sr., summing up her two years with th Pacesetters.

Creating an atmosphere in which th Pacesetters worked hard while enjoyin themselves, enabled the team to becom a unit, and brought the girls closer togeth er. Summing up the year, senior Lo Gieringer stated that, "The team ha come together well, and we've had th chance to make a lot of lasting friend ships." The squad managed to achieve level of perfection that instilled a sense o awe in all who watched their dazzlin performances.

Two dedicated groups provide support

For the school

by Gary Tsarovsky

It was expected that when attending a football or basketball game, one would see cheerleaders providing support for their team. Now, this was extended past the traditional sports. If one was to go to a girls' basketball or volleyball game, or a wrestling meet, one would find those energetic, spirited, and supportive groups of girls who were selected to be Girls' Sports or Wrestling Cheerleaders. These girls not only provided the support needed for the teams, but helped generate interest for these sports in the school.

The Girls' Sports cheerleaders put a lot of hard work and support into the school. They attended two to four games per week, and made posters to decorate team member's lockers. They cheered for such sports as basketball, volleyball, swimming and tennis.

The program, now in its fourth year, became more popular this year. Ten girls, all sophomores, were chosen to be on the squad. This year the squad also gained a new sponsor, Mrs. Margaret Davis. When asked how she felt about the year, Mrs. Davis replied, "It's been a very pleasant experience working with the squad and I hope to see the fine spirit of these girls continue and grow for next year."

"The cheerleading experience has helped us become more confident in ourselves, as well as become great friends."

Monica Wood, soph.

Another group of dedicated girls were the Wrestling Cheerleaders. These girls were chosen at the start of the wrestlin season and cheered for a shorter perio of time, compared to other squads, b they gave it their all.

The girls attended all the wrestlin meets, at home as well as away. The were usually one to two meets a wee and if the meet was held on Saturday, lasted all day. This meant that for te hours a day the cheerleaders provide constant support for the team. Th helped the team members become gre friends with the girls.

Both cheerleading squads provide valuable support for the teams. The tim they put into the games, meets, practice and tournaments was greatly appreciate by the teams as well as the fans.

Enthusiasm and unity of cheerleading add

An extra spark

by Gary Tsarovsky

Ready! O.K.! . . . These words, usually preceding an exciting cheer, were heard more than once during a sporting event. The girls who led the crowd in the cheers were the junior varsity, sophomore, and freshmen cheerleaders. Whether the teams were winning or losing, rain or shine, no matter what the size of the crowd, these spirited leaders were always present at the games. Time after time their cheering added an extra spark to the effort of the teams.

Averaging three to four games per week, the squads cheered at all the football, soccer, and basketball games on their respective levels. The cheerleaders were in attendance at more than sixty games during the year, as well as helping out at pep rallies and school assemblies.

Along with the addition of the freshmen squad, two new sponsors were also added to the program. "I thoroughly enjoyed working with junior and senior girls," commented Ms. Pat Teegarden, overall sponsor. Mrs. Linda Taylor was the freshmen/sophomore sponsor. Both women had previously been at Nallwood Jr. High where Ms. Teegarden was the drill team sponsor for over fifteen years, while Mrs. Taylor sponsored cheerleading.

"We had to overcome many obstacles, but persistance and hard work made this squad the best it could be."

Jayme Klein, Jr.

Although both sponsors brought leadership to the squads, they had a lot of natural talent to work with. Practicing in order to bring out this talent, started during the summer and continued throughout the year. All three squads attended a camp at the University of Kansas, where the JV and sophomore squads received the highest award in the JV division. "Practicing during the summer at South made us much more comfortable with each other and gave us a chance to become familiar with the school itself," said Lesley Swender, soph., captain of the sophomore squad.

While the freshmen squad agreed that cheerleading was tons of fun and a great way to meet new people, Katie Morgan, jr., pointed out that, "cheerleading taught me to work with different kinds of people." All in all, everyone felt that the unity and close friendships within the squads helped to make the year a success.

With energy and cheer, spirit group boosts school

Enthusiasm

by Lisa Colombano

With a constant smile and glimmer of excitement the Varsity Cheerleaders and Yell Leaders gave added enthusiasm not only to the crowds, but to the teams as well. The spirit and pride these two groups shared was evident throughout the year.

To prepare for the year, which included performing at about fifty sporting events, the girls started out by attending camp. At camp they learned many new cheers and stunts, but more importantly, they began to learn about working as a team. "The time we spent at camp gave us a great opportunity to get to know one another better. This helped us to work as a team," said Carolyn Kenney, jr. On the final day of camp, the squads competed, and South was one of a select few nominated for the award of excellence. Once school began the cheerleaders met for an hour every day, and then before school on game days.

"Promoting school spirit through yell leading was a lot of fun, and a great way to make friends."

Gary Culliss, jr.

Under the direction of first year sponsor Ms. Pat Teegarden, the cheerleaders worked together with the yell leaders. Clinics were held that taught the girls not only about double-stunts, but also about stunts involving the yell leaders. John Johnson, jr., said, "Working with the cheerleaders was fun because it gave us a chance to get involved in the excitement of the games." Ms. Teegarden said she, "was impressed by the way th group strived to come together as team." To help in the organization, th team was led by Captain Cindy Smit and Co-captain Dawn Goodman.

Along with cheering on the varsi boys' teams, the cheerleaders and y leaders also performed at all pep asse blies, and took part in the Drill Team E travaganza put on in the spring.

Looking ahead, Carolyn Kenney, j said, "Having four juniors on the tea was really unusual, but the experience working as a unit will be a big help ne year." Working as a team was the goal the two groups, and through dedicati and hours of practice, they were able achieve their goal. At the same time, the carried over their spirit and pride to th teams, and the student body.

A Spectrum of Competition

State champs! Need we say more? The '86-'87 year will always be held close to the heart of anyone involved with the varsity soccer team's season. We persevered through many close games during the quest for the state's first soccer championship.

Although victory was sweet, many other components added to the popularity and success of athletics. We found sports to be the ideal way to release and forget the day's pressures through the natural high which accompanied our total commitment and ultimate goal of success.

Perhaps the key to our sports program was our desire to compete. And competitors we were. Despite various setbacks, including many injuries and illnesses, our teams played with an intensity which created a spectrum of competition to be admired.

THE VICTORY CELEBRATION begins as South Soccer takes State.

Change prompts fresh ideas as new head coach makes transition easy

by Jenny Barenberg

FRIDAY, a word held close to the hearts of most high school students, seemed to be the shortest day of the week, but for the varsity football team, Friday, or game day, was fifteen hours of mental game preparation.

This was only one philosophy of the new head football coach, Mr. Fred Merrell. His fresh ideas and innovative plans must have worked because of the team's outstanding start with three consecutive victories over S.M. North, Truman, and Leavenworth. "He seems to be more involved with our personal lives and well-being. Through football, he can teach us about life in general," said Bumper Landreth, sr.

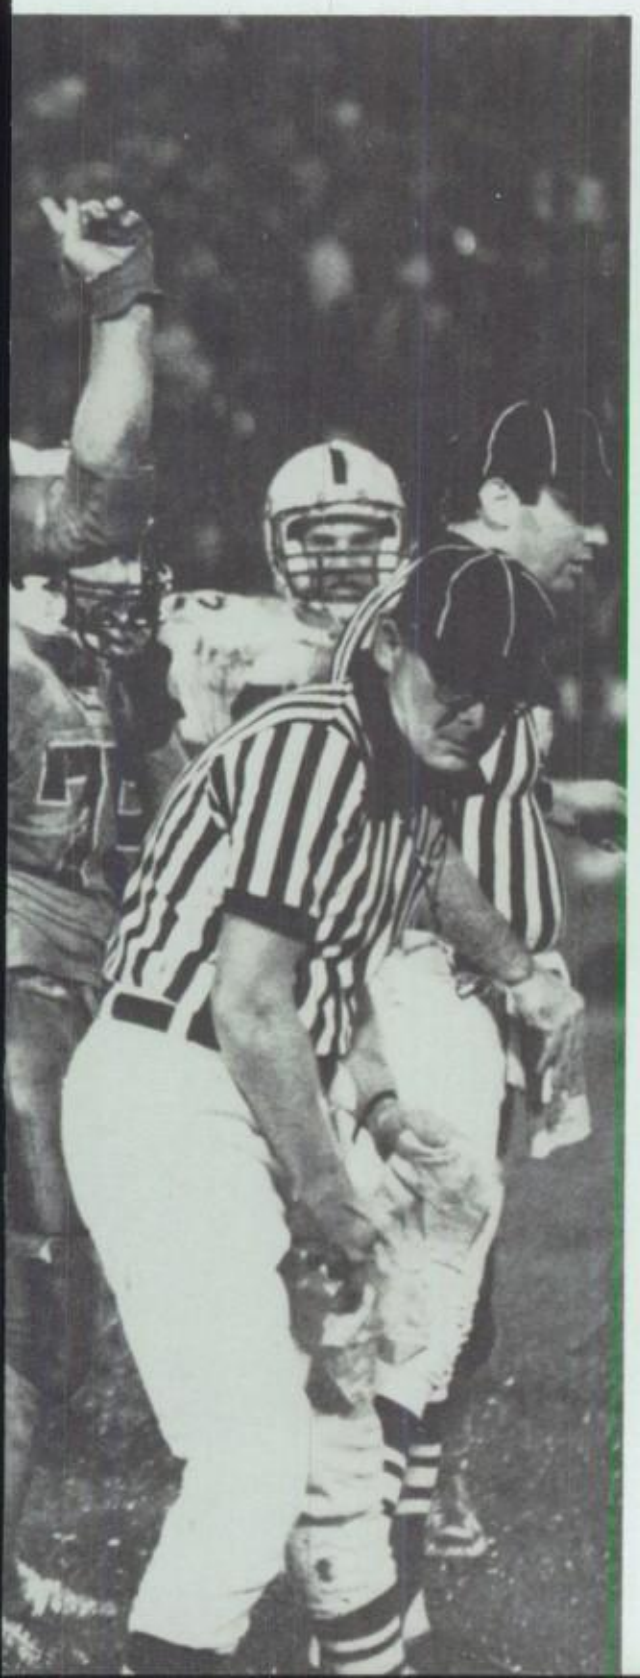
According to Bryan White, sr., the concept of staying at school until after the game reinforced "the team's unity." At first, the players were apprehensive about the idea, but after they realized the positive effects it had on their concentration and preparation for the game, the team often looked forward to Fridays.

Knee injuries unfortunately affected two starting quarterbacks, Mike Brandt, sr., and Mark Kahler, sr. Ken Rosenbaum, sr., according to Kent Thompson, assistant coach, was almost "forced" into the quarterback position. With his speed and field sense, the transition was a smooth one.

A strong core of senior leadership was another reason for the team's success. These roles were filled naturally by seniors, Landreth, Don Hochanadel, and John Bartel. Bryan White added that Randy Flagler added an extra "inspirational spirit to practices."

And spirit was what kept the Raiders going throughout this transitional year. John Jacobs, sr., said, "By writing our goals down, each player knew what was expected. Now we just have to accomplish them."

RANDY FLAGLER, SR., takes a handoff from Ken Rosenbaum, sr., as he tries to make a first down.



"The unforgettable fellowship acquired through hard work and fun times brought us closer together as the season progressed. This team's unity, along with good leadership allowed us to overcome adversity."

Competitive spirit controls physical JV

"The team has matured a lot since last year, and our record reflects it. We're more of a team instead of a group if individuals."
—Matt Biehunko, jr.

by Linda Derks

"Those who consistently outperform themselves will ultimately outperform their competitors."

-James Loehr

Consistency: what every athlete hungrily strives for, and what every team works for relentlessly. To perform well, play after play, knowing that winning can't be achieved without consistency.

The junior varsity football team is a perfect example of the ability to be continually competitive. In the first three games they played, not one point was scored on the solid defense. Their coach, Mr. Tim Burkindine, said, "This year's team seems to be able to play together as a single unit and do it very well. Over the last five seasons, this group is the most physical."

Not only were the players physical, but the incredible mental intensity they played with stayed with them game after game.

"We played with some mistakes, but playing against North was the stepping stone for the season." said Chris Garrett, jr.

Truman became the next victim, as the team trounced them 33-0. Then came the victory over undefeated Lawrence.

Rich Gochis, jr., said, "The Lawrence game was a great win for us because we all came together and played hard."

Playing hard and doing the best they could propelled the team to it's strongest start in years and brought the respect they so rightfully deserved. The kind of respect that gave them confidence to try harder.

"Team effort is outstanding. They are exciting and energetic." said Burkindine.

Consistency, teamwork, good coaching, and mental intensity all combined for a winning season for this junior varsity football team.

Hard work pays off

Weights enhance teams

by John Bartel

Ugh! - The battle cry for most sophomores and freshmen involved in the summer weight program. The program began June 7, just one week after school let out. Grant Ingram, soph., expressed his thoughts, "Showing up at 7 a.m. every morning to work out was tough, but I think the extra pain helped me reach my full potential."

After the freshman and sophomore coaches, Mr. Mike Cooper, Mr. Kirk Miller, Mr. Rex Arthur, Mr. Keith Allen, and Mr. Bruce Bove, became acquainted with each player's ability, the sophomores and freshmen were divided into even teams for each class. However, only 26 players tried out for sophomore football. Allen and Bove thought it was in best interest to have only one sophomore team. Bove said, "In years previous, the boys had to work hard because the teams were small. This year the boys need to work hard to be able to start and play a position on the team."

The summer weights and extra conditioning paid off with early sophomore victories over S.M. North, Olathe North and Lee's Summit. The sophomores strong team unity was a factor according to Bove. The freshmen who were equally successful, posted exceptional victories over S.M. North and Lawrence.

Apparently, the hard work of not only the players, but also coaches, contributed to the winning season. Dan Seleglid, soph., summed up the group effort. "We all worked together, the coaches and the players. I think this is one of the main reasons the season was so successful.

Soccer takes State

by John Bartel

The seconds seemed like minutes as time ticked slowly off the clock. The score was 2-1; would the one goal lead hold? Finally, the game clock reached zero. The crowd became ecstatic as the team took a victory lap and Coach John Stewart was handed the first ever Kansas State Soccer Championship trophy. Duke Christofferson, sr., summed up the moment, "At the beginning of the season it was hard to imagine being State champions, but we did it."

Even though the Raiders started slowly with a 3-2 record they ended up with a superior record of 16-4-4. Bill Olsen, sr., elaborated on the team's record, "The start of the season was particularly tough. Although, the rain delays resulting in extra practice time were probably beneficial to our team."

The inclement weather during the first part of the season was the cause of many headaches for the soccer team. Games were either cancelled or postponed. Paul Cullota, sr., said, "If it wasn't the rain, it was a mix up in scheduling. I didn't mind the practicing, I just wanted to have some true competition."

The incorporation of a strong defense transformed into a quick and effective offense was the result of using each player on the field. Every member had a strong sense of teamwork, spirit, and accomplishment, on and off the field. By looking beyond their obstacles, and keeping a positive attitude, the team was successful in all areas of the game.

In the tournament they were to play in the second of the two semi-final games. Unfortunately the previous game went into overtime. Olsen said, "We were ready to play an hour before our match. This made everyone extra nervous because of the wait."

With little rest after beating Derby 1-0 in the semi-finals, the team faced the challenge of undefeated Wichita Northwest. Cullota remarked, "The odds were against us, but we met the challenge and were rewarded with the State Championship!"

"It's exciting to know that our names will go down as the first ever to win the Kansas soccer championship."

Solid young teams outperform competition

by Linda Derks

Through dedication and hard work, the winning tradition of Raider soccer was once again carried on. The junior varsity team compiled a very commendable record of 12-4, even though they were forced to play four games in one week because of rain-outs. The sophomore team also did very well with a 7-1-4 record. With the reorganization, a freshmen team was formed. They did not do as well with a record of 5-7-1, but they achieved experience and a better knowledge of the game.

For the JV team a solid foundation, a great knowledge of soccer, and the coaching of Mr. Neil Kelly all combined for a winning season.

"Our team was pretty balanced out. Every individual's ability was fairly equal, which helped us play better as a team," commented Sean Hosford, jr.

One problem all teams faced was the rain, which caused games to be cancelled. Many games weren't made up until the last week of the season. Kent LaLonde, jr., said, "The fields were flooded from the rain, and there was no ball control. It tired us out, but we kept up our stamina."

The sophomores, under the coaching of Mr. Bob Herdt, came in second in the league. Their toughest game of the season was the last game against S.M. East, which was the deciding factor for first and second in league standings. The game ended up a tie, but East took first because "they had less ties overall during the season," said Andy Mays, soph.

The freshmen were coached by Mr. Mike Nichols. Each match was hard fought, but Kevin Rabbit fr., said, "The toughest game for us was against Rockhurst."

Surviving the terrible weather, all teams managed to enjoy successful seasons, and each team holds promising talent for next year.

"Our team this year really pulled together to play as a unit rather than focusing on certain individuals. We had a good season with few disappointments."

Young team races to third place at State

"We not only were able to place third in the state, but we were also able to have a lot of fun doing it. Tom Mitchell and Coach Naster provided encouraging words and challenges that made all the good times ones to remember.

—Dave Douglas, jr.

by Linda Derks

The huddled mass anxiously waited behind the starting line. The months of training over the summer and the hundreds of miles that were run lay behind. Those miles were forgotten, and each runner realized that only the next race mattered.

The training miles paid off with great rewards. At the State meet the team placed third, capping off a very successful season.

Although many varsity runners from last year graduated, the team still did outstanding. The varsity team consisted mainly of juniors with one sophomore. The three top runners were juniors, Dave Douglass, Jeff Patterson and Lance Christman.

The head coach of all this talent was Mr. Mike Naster. The entire team was kept constantly challenged by his tough workouts.

Lance Christman, jr., said, "Eight to ten miles were run every day after school."

The workouts were the key to their success. The varsity team competed at league and placed second; good for many teams, but the Raider team had high goals, and felt they could have done better.

Christman said, "League was disappointing because we lost by only one point. We were expected to win it."

Regionals was the next race, which they came back and won by one point, barely edging out S.M. Northwest.

The junior varsity and "C" teams also contributed to the effort of the entire program. Each member strived for his position, making the competition more difficult for each individual and their competitors.

Runners reach goals

Raiders place fifth

by John Bartel

Hopes were high at the dawn of the girls cross country season. They set their goals', both individually and as a unit. Coach Mike Naster had high expectations for the team as well. "We kept injury free, that's the key because we didn't have much depth. The team had tremendous ability and tenacity," Naster said.

The team did remain injury free and their harriers would have made any team proud. The Raiders were led by seniors Linda Overholser and Lisa Overholser, who were leading runners last year, and by sophomore, LeeAnn Conway. The leadership was supported by a cast of strong varsity and JV runners. Naster reflected on how strong the team actually was, "The girls are definitely one of the top teams in the state."

Coach Naster's prediction came true when it came time for the State championship, in Manhattan. The team as a whole came in fifth with a composite score of 137, beating SM East by one point. LeeAnn Conway, soph., was the top placing female in the Sun Country, finishing fifth overall.

The team owes its success to the long hours and rigorous practices. Practices included fifteen to twenty minutes of stretching, and running several miles. Lisa Overholser, sr., said, "Practices were not only a time for the physical tests, but also stressed the mental discipline needed to win."

Susan Howard, sr., believes not only the hard work was the key, "The team's ability was one thing, but the real strength in this team was the unity we had."

"At the beginning of the season all of us set goals. With the help from one another, we reached the point we aimed for.

Seniors provide experience but injuries plague team's momentum

by Jenny Barenberg

"Third Year's a Charm!" This was the anticipation for the girls' varsity volleyball team this year. Translated, it meant that this was their third year in a row to take a trip to the State tournament. This year they wanted to make it to the final four, but Wichita South defeated them in three games in their first match. They eventually took fifth at State, and tied for tenth in the city.

The third new varsity coach in three years, Mr. Ron Millard, was only one change encountered by the girls. Two new coaches were added to the staff, Mrs. Dana Kennedy was the freshman coach, while Miss Peggy Whitcher was the sophomore coach. All of the teams ended their seasons with winning records.

The freshmen took first place in their league tournament, while the sophomores placed third. Jenny Lynch, soph., said, "I think being a member of the South volleyball team helped make the change to high school easier because we each had somewhat of the same interests."

The junior varsity, plagued with injuries, was coached by Miss Nancy Leeper for the second year. They went into their league tournament with only six players. Unfortunately, one last injury made it difficult for them to enter the final four.

Pam Mays, sr., did not feel that the varsity's record, 22-16, was indicative of the kind of team they had. "An abundance of injuries crippled our team at critical points in our season. This prevented the original starters from playing as a team during the season. Fortunately, we had enough players to compensate for our handicaps." Led by a strong core of seniors, Kris Knight, Jenny Barenberg, Pam Mays, Kelly Winters, and Linda Derks, jr., the varsity was able to overcome the disadvantage of having a new coach. Kasey Kropf, jr., added, "Because of our ability to come from behind in Sub-State, as well as other tournaments throughout the season, we were able to take the trip to State!"

"The transition this year was hard, as expected. The contribution and hard work from each team improved yesterday's mistakes, and because of that, every season was a winning one."

"Transition" for some sports meant hours of reorganization, increased budgets, and more people, but for the girls' tennis team, the addition of Freshmen meant a more diverse and competitive skill level.

Lesley Lewis, fr., was one newcomer that proved she was good enough to start in the number one varsity single's position. Her goal this year was to, "do really well at Regionals, and then do great at State. Singles is an individual sport, but when the team is cheering you on, you don't feel so alone."

The success the entire team had was closely related to the spirit and cooperation of each member, and "cooperation" proved to be a key word for the number one doubles team, Carolyn Kenney and Jenny Smith, jrs. According to Kenney, their goal was to be undefeated, but unfortunately they lost to S.M. East early in the season. She said, "The goals tha our whole team set at the beginning o the year, showed that we worked har throughout the season."

Liz Burge, sr., felt that the team di more drilling together, and this helpe form more unity at meets. With the aid o head coach, Mrs. Bobby Gochis, and nev assistant coach, Mr. Duane Gabrielson each girl worked on good strategy durin practices.

At League, Susie Carlin, sr., and Lis Colombano, sr., placed second in numbe two doubles. The team placed secon overall at the League tournament.

Burge summed up the season by say ing, "I think the team has been ver successful—especially in the matches That's when we worked our hardest an encouraged each other the most. Ou records show that."

Just imagine: a golfball flying off the tee nd sailing down the fairway. Imagining vas what the girls golf team often had to ettle for this year. Due to inclement veather tournaments were postponed or ven cancelled. In addition to the can- elled tournaments, the rainy weather revented them from important practice me.

The rain didn't dampen the spirit of ynn LaHood, junior. "The rain delays vere annoying, but when the tourna- nents were held, we played with nthusiasm."

The team was made up of five juniors nd six seniors. This season's squad lacked he ever important underclassmen raw alent. However, LaHood and Ally Lubin, r., posted team leading scores as well as providing key leadership. Nancy Fredrick, r., said, "They (the juniors) helped the team very much. They filled in for the seniors that couldn't play and did a great job."

Coach Sheila Norton was convinced that this year's team was stronger than any in the past. "I think we'll be in the top three at regionals and go to state. South hasn't been there in a few years."

At the Blue Valley North Invitational, they showed their true colors. They posted scores good enough to take second only to Blue Valley North, who was playing on their home course at Leawood South Country Club.

The golfers felt that their season was an enjoyable one. Tracy DeMoss, sr., summed up the year by saying, "This is the most successful season I've been involved with at South. The rain slowed us down a little, but not enough to take the fun out of the sport."

Gymnasts prevail

despite injuries

by Linda Derks

The expectations at the beginning of the year for the girls' gymnastics team were not high. They wanted to do well, but had doubts because of the combination of a new coach and a lot of inexperienced freshmen and sophomores.

The new coach, Mrs. Vikki Scott, commented on the season, "I've seen a real team develop that is talented enough to challenge the toughest competition." Christy Burns, sr., commented, "With the new coach, we all seem to work harder."

The hard work was easily detected through the difficult and graceful moves that were performed. One problem the team faced was injuries, which ranged from stiff backs and ripped up hands, to the more serious injuries involving knees and ankles.

Amanda Knighton, sr., said, "Almost e ery person on the team was injured one time or another."

But the injuries didn't seem to phas the team. One of the first big meets the had was the S.M. North Invitational. The challenged the solid competition, an came back from the meet with a ne self-confidence.

"The North Invitational was tough said Debbie Glazier, jr., "There was a l of competition, but we pulled togeth and placed fifth out of eleven schools Led by seniors, Courtney Smith, Amand Knighton, Christy Burns, Julie Bennett, an Tria Chomyak, the experienced tea showed their great talent.

Wrestling. According to the Thorndike-arnhart Dictionary, the word means a port or contest in which each of the two pponents tries to throw or force the ther to the ground. The definition is a ther simple one, but wrestling not only volves the time on the mat but every inute off the mat as well.

The wrestler does not just attend his ractices. He also follows a strict diet. Ja-n Rubis, jr., comments on his diet, "It as my feeling that I would have a better ecord in a lower weight class. So one eekend before official weigh-ins I didn't at and only drank small amounts of wa-er." This might seem insane to the onwrestler, but this is common practice mong wrestlers. Mike Desmarteau, sr., so follows a strict diet, "The week before a tournament I'll try not to eat anything but the bare essentials. This might include salads, fruit, and breads (carbohydrates). It is very important to not starve yourself of your daily nutrition."

After a SMS wrestler makes his respective weight, he must face the challenge of making the varsity for that week. During the week, the team holds wrestle-offs which places the winning wrestler on the varsity squad. Bob Bettis, sr., said, "The pressure is just as great during the wrestle-offs as it is during the actual tournament the following weekend. If you win you feel great, but if you lose, you take the attitude that you need to try harder."

Intensity jumps higher during season giving boys the edge

by Jenny Barenberg

South students in Hawaiian shorts and shirts, snow falling outside in the middle of January?! Sound cold? Not inside. The Raider boys' varsity basketball team was hot on the court. The "Island Paradise" party was only one spirit soaring event that lifted the team from a slow start at the Grandview Tournament, to a trouncing of S.M. North at home.

The Raiders beat the Lions by two points in overtime the previous week in Lawrence. Barry Maupin, a senior forward, said, "Lawrence was a turning point for the season. Three days before, we were embarrassed by Leavenworth, and the players had some doubt as to whether we could come back, or even win another game. That night in Lawrence, we discovered what roles we had to play to come together as a team and beat teams the way we should have all along."

As the crowds got rowdier, the boys played harder, but more importantly, like a team. The season saw many different starters, picked by the veteran coaching of Mr. Paul Sexton. Al Jones, sr., who did not play last season, was a big success this year as the leading scorer and rebounder. Seniors, Jim Utt, Jason Monroe, and junior, Dan Gurley took on the responsibility of the guard position. P.J. Widmer, Mark Willis, Barry Maupin, srs., with Rob Reiman and Cass Gilbert, jrs., rounded off this balance of height and finesse.

When asked about the intermediate goals set for the team, Widmer answered, "to play as a team and cut down the amount of turnovers. We also don't want to lose to West." He said the reason why they did not start the season very well was because, "The intensity level was not as high as it needed to be. It picked up at Northwest and Lawrence, and we were much more successful."

DAN GURLEY, JR., maneuvers around a Rockhurst opponent as he drives to the basket.

"Our record doesn't reflect how hard we've worked, but in the end I feel the whole team will benefit from the hard work and experiences which we have encountered."

Individual and team efforts prove to be victorious for young cagers

by Linda Derks

As the snow quietly fell outside, the sounds of basketballs hitting the floor inside the Raider gymnasium became something to be heard for four months. Long intense practices were held each day for the junior varsity, sophomore and freshmen teams. At the beginning of the season, each team set their team goals high: to win their respective tournaments.

The junior varsity team, which consisted of nine players, was definitely an aggressive team which played with a lot of intensity. The JV team was coached by Mr. Rocky Stone, who pointed out Rich Gochis and Bryan Spengler, jrs., along with an outstanding freshman, David Gronek, to be players commended for their great amount of hustle. Midway through the season, the team was 7-2. An exceptional game with total team effort against Leavenworth allowed the Raiders to storm their way to a 59-41 victory. Coach Stone commented, "We played with a lot of intensity. Leavenworth just couldn't do anything with us."

As in past years, the sophomore team was divided into an A team and a B team, which were both coached by Mr. Kent Thompson. Midway through the season, the boys' A team had a 5-3 record with close losses to S.M. West, S.M. East, and Rockhurst. The B team had a commendable record of 7-1. Coach Thompson said, "We have some good-sized kids inside who will consistently score in double figures."

A new change in the program was the addition of the freshmen. The A and B teams were coached by Mr. Mike Cooper and Mr. Jim Gurley, and it was evident that the young players had a great amount of talent with their exceptional hustle and desire to improve.

"Through our hard work and determination, we achieved our goals set at the beginning of the season."

Varsity experience help fundamentals improve

by Linda Derks

As the winter sports season began, excitement mounted for the girls' basketball team. The girls had high expectations for the season, particularly because four of the five starters were returning.

Julie Dermeyer, sr., said, "We have a lot of experience and that will be a tremendous help."

The girls had much to work on as they set their goals high: to be a top contender in the league and to go to State. These goals were not out of reach for the experienced team.

Coach Ron Millard said, "Because there are a larger number of experienced players coming back, they should execute fundamentals with a higher degree of skill."

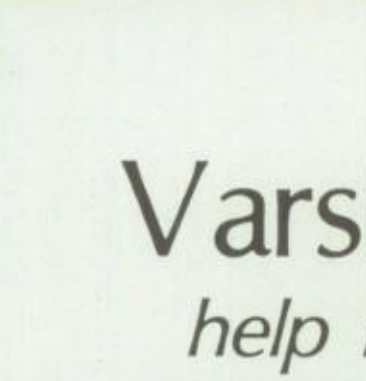
The nucleus of the team was the starting players; Jenny Barenberg, Betsy Cantrell and Kris Knight, srs., along with juniors Leah Honeycutt and Stephanie Young. Coming off the bench to give much support were Julie Dermeyer and Pam Mays, srs., and Linda Derks, jr.

Knight, sr., commented, "We get along on and off the court which makes it a better program as a whole."

The first game of the season was close as the Lady Raiders edged S.M. West 48-46 at home. In their first away game the team trounced Harmon 77-51, setting a new school record for the total number of points scored in a Varsity girls' basketball game.

The J.V. team, under the coaching of Nancy Leeper, was also victorious in the first two games.

Allie Lubin, jr., said, "As the season goes on, we are executing the plays better and we are playing as a team."



"We had a lot of Varsity experience and strong player combinations which made it easy to allow substitutions without a break in the game's momentum."

Fundamentals prove important as team develops long, but fun season

by Jenny Barenberg

Winter—A time to find those long-lost hightops hoping they don't fit so you can purchase the newest in technologically advanced basketball shoes.

Buying new shoes was not the only preparation needed for the long, four month freshman and sophomore basketball season. Early season conditioning and the redevelopment of fundamental skills were two priorities that made the rest of the season much more successful.

The sophomores, coached for the second year by Mr. Doug Weaver, began the season with a 1-2 record. Weaver pointed out that, "Olathe North was our best overall game so far. We played well together." Teamwork is what makes a young team click, and that is what the sophomores had. Ann Bennett, soph., said, "Our team works together as a whole." Even though this principle seems simple, it was hard to put new ideas together. A one point loss to S.M. Northwest in a hard fought game with good rebounding by Margie Meyers, soph., and outstanding outside shots by Jenny Lynch, soph., was a great disappointment.

The freshmen opened their season with a tight, two point victory over S.M. We Coach Jay Roberts was the junior varsi coach last year, and said that coachin freshmen girls was totally different. "Mo patience is needed with younger gir with concentration placed o fundamentals." Kathy Kelly and Susa Gordon, fresh., were only two of th consistent players that made the freshme team grow and improve. Jane Schmit, fr said, "Everyone on the team is fun an therefore our practices and games wer really fun. This made the season go b more quickly."

"As a team, we strive to be the best. We help each other and try to improve as we go along."

Underclassmen support efforts of team

by John Bartel

As you enter the steam-filled pool area, you notice that something is a little different. It is not only the usual seniors, juniors, and sophomores, but freshmen too. The young swimmers practiced with the determination equal to that of their older counterparts.

The work of the younger team members did not go unnoted. Several of these swimmers made the team that represented South in the State championships. Trevor Hansen, Chris Kalberg, Chris Chaplin, sophs., and alternate Paul Person, fr., were selected by posting state qualifying times in regular season meets and in the league championship. Hansen was league champion in two events, the individual medley and the 100 backstroke. Kalberg, who also had an outstanding performance at league, posted times good enough to earn the bronze in the 200 fly and 100 fly.

Both coaches, Mr. Bruce Bove and Mr. Tim Burkindine, were pleased with the individual performances of the whole team. Burkindine commented, "The younger swimmers provided a base to the team. This was instrumental in the upperclassmen's ability to shine through."

The upperclassmen did not let the opportunity pass. Junior diver, Mike Martz, came close to winning the league title. Martz' efforts fell short by only 0.65 points. A number of juniors' times qualified them for state. They were Troy Hansen, Andy Mason, and Brady Brooke.

Chuck Lunney, sr., commented about the addition of freshmen, "The freshmen were always there to take your place, it gave you an incentive to do better."

"With the help of the Freshmen and Sophomores, this year's team improved as the season progressed."

Weekend release

Intramurals provides competition

by John Bartel

It's 8 a.m. Saturday morning. The alarm clock sounds and you fight the temptation to go back to bed. You get up and don the uniform and sweats. When you arrive downstairs, you make your way into the kitchen and make a quick scramble for nourishment. Suddenly you hear a horn honk and as you leave, you yell upstairs, "I'll be up at school."

This statement wakes your parents. Bewildered they look at each other and say, "School?"

You get into the car and ask who you are going to play. Everyone in the car responds in unison, "The Doom and The Faculty." As you reach the gym, the sound of squeeking sneakers gets your adrenaline pumping. You take a few warm-up shots, shed the sweats and are ready for an hour of court pounding action packed game of basketball. This is intramural basketball.

Intramural basketball was perfect for a weekend release of energy for the students who chose to engage in the Saturday games. Mike Brandt, sr., commented, "The games were a great way of forgetting about the daily routine of school and work, not to mention the exercise."

Excercise was not the only reason students got involved with the Saturday morning ritual. The idea of competition is why P.J. Born, sr., joined a team, "Playing your friends really lets you compete for something, not like a pickup game."

Coach Tim Burkindine, who scheduled games and was responsible for the student referees, believed that sportsmanship was the key in the success of the intramural league. Each team was responsible for two referees every game day. The student referees were in charge of the fouls and minor calls. While each team kept their own scores. Mark Kahler, sr., said, "Keeping your own scores and playing under student referees was tough but it showed that a bunch of teenagers could get together and just have a good time."

CHRIS WHITWORTH. SR., is fouled by the defense as he lays up the ball.

A Spectrum of Ideas

. . . there's no point to it, I am not going to pick up that crayfish. So I'll take a zero on the lab, that thing is the size of a lobster! Well, maybe I'll go after her . . . no, after him . . . well maybe after . . .

Academics at South stressed something greater than the ability to memorize; it attempted to help us help ourselves. Knowledge of the facts was merely one indicator of our progress towards reaching greater objectives. The true importance of our education lay in our achievements, actual understanding and new experiences.

Despite our relatively negative attitude towards academics, we always seemed to welcome the feeling of accomplishment, whether it was from doing a research project, repairing an engine, or even picking up a crayfish just because it's there.

It did not matter if we forgot some of the facts. What was important was that we retained both the belief that almost any goal could be reached and the motivation to continue to cultivate our own spectrum of ideas.

English teachers expose students to various literary masterpieces including several plays written by

by Karyn Poznick

Throughout the students' education at South, they are exposed to a variety of new and different ideas. These ideas may have been thrown at them once or several times. The views of Shakespeare were presented to students each and every year through different works. Attempting to avoid Shakespeare proved pointless since his works appeared in every English class.

"Most students experience their first serious study of Shakespeare in English Nine. I enjoy teaching the unit and sharing the pride many of them feel when they do well with this difficult subject matter," commented Mrs. Pat Ruggles, freshman English teacher. Freshmen experienced Shakespeare through "Romeo and Juliet". Not only did they read the play, but assignments consisting of paraphrazing and writing five paragraph themes were given to the students.

Sophomore English class presented "Julius Ceasar" and "Merchant of Venice" to its pupils. These plays offered a greater challenge through a more difficult level of vocabulary. Harder assignments and more devotion of time was required from the students. However with great perseverance, students managed to plow through "Ceasar."

Traditionally as a junior, "MacBeth" was read. The tragedy and goriness of the playwright surfaced at this point. "I kind of liked reading the play. It's important to have a well-rounded background," said Felice Newman, jr.

Seniors were subjected to "Othello" and "Hamlet." By their fourth year, most students had grown accustomed to the plays of Shakespeare and some even grew to appreciate his work. "It's easy for me to pick up on his points because I enjoy reading things from his time. I learn not only about his style, but also people's thoughts and behavior from the Shakespearean period which still exists today", said Brooke Wickstrom, sr.

Most students have come to understand the importance of learning about Shakespeare. His understanding of human nature, his creativity with words, and his dramatic writings make his plays an important part of the English classes' curriculum. Thus, students were offered a well-rounded experience in literature.

Students interested with preparing themselves for their future roles in society often enroll in Child Development

by Karyn Poznick

Following the usual trend, parents often did not understand their children. Was it from a lack of caring or just a lack of knowledge? Child Development class offered one solution to the latter problem.

In the class, a child's emotional, physical, social, and intellectual growth from conception to age five was studied. "Child Development possibly may be the most important class a student takes, because parenting is the hardest job they'll ever have," said Mrs. Susan Tupp, the course's instructor.

Through speakers, films, videotapes, and lectures, students in the class learned about the different aspects of children. The earliest stages of pregnancy, including complications and birth defects, were presented. The class continued to learn how to work with children, especially handicapped ones, at their various ages.

The knowledge gained by the students will help them later as a parent or person who works with children. For example, many graduates of the class enrolled in Exploring Childhood. In this class, the students spent three days a week working in a classroom environment.

The last ten days of each semester were spent practicing all that the students had learned. A play school for three, four, and five year olds was set up in the back of Room 173. Children of relatives, neighbors and the faculty were brought in for those days. The students planned and carried out activities lasting two and a half hours. The students took turns observing and working directly with the children. The children were exposed to art, music, animals in the Field Tech. room, and they also took walks through the SMESEL.

Students were interested in gaining knowledge about young children. "I wanted to learn about kids since I enjoy working with them. Sometime in the future, when I'm a parent, it'll be useful," said Dawn Davis, jr. Upon leaving the class, the students were better prepared for the agonies of parenting.

by Karyn Roznick

Today's dream, tomorrow's future. The world is at our fingertips.

Not only is the world at our fingertips, but so are the keyboards of computers. After all, computers control the future. Many students enrolled, with the future in mind, in the various computer classes offered at South. Each year, the curriculum grew and changed just enough to keep up with the ever advancing field.

A perfect example is the Data Processing class taught by Mrs. Alta Whitehead. She commented, "I really think the kids will benefit from the improvements made in the class." On the Apple IIE computers, this year's students were the first to use the new program, Appleworks.

Appleworks is written in the language of Database. Students learned to master the use of the word processor through many assignments. Edited and original letters were typed into the computer by the students. "The ability to use a word processor is useful to students now and later in life," Whitehead commented.

Creativity was often helpful, especially in the section dealing with advertisements. During this time, projects containing sayings written in different fonts and size lettering were properly centered inside margins.

Char Gaulding, jr., summed up the popularity of the Data Processing class saying, "It's a fun class if you know what is going on. Computers are our future, so that is why I got interested.

Students have a great opportunity to explore different countries and cultures with the study of foreign Languages

by Stacey Heeg

Exploring a different culture and learning the language, history, and literature of another country sparked interest in many students. For French 5 AP students this interest surpassed the common curiosity to learn about people in another part of the world. Their interest grew into an intense study of the French language and French life.

First semester the students reviewed grammar, verb tenses, and vocabulary. At the end of first semester the French students held a traditional French Christmas meal, the Revellion. For French 5 AP students, this was their third year for participating in the event, which proved to be as festive and successful as in past years.

The students began second semester by listening to a French mystery. They continued the semester with the study of French literature and the preparation for the advanced placement exam.

"Often times the class is difficult, but I feel the rewards are well-worth the hard work. Foreign language offers a wide range of opportunities, so I am really glad I kept up with my French studies," explained Nancy Urbanski, sr.

by Mary Beth Burwinkle

While the Ball Python slithered along its cage, the Field Tech. student pointed out to the young children the markings on the snake which made it unique.

Field Tech continued to be one of the most popular elective science courses among students. Dr. Dean Jernigan, commonly referred to by the students as "Doc", proved to be an intriguing and interesting instructor. Commenting on his feelings about teaching, Dr. Jernigan said, "You can not educate a person, you can only provide an environment in which he can educate himself."

In the fall and spring there were many different elementary schools that requested the Field Tech students as guides through the SMESL (Shawnee Mission Environmental Science Lab). A typical tour began with an observation of the farmyard where the children saw such animals as chickens, ducks, geese, and turkeys. Then it was on to the prairie dog pen where silence was essential in order to catch a rare glimpse of the creatures. Continuing on, the children observed the different types of plants and trees in the woods and witnessed such animals as squirrels and rabbits. The trail then led the children to the pond where some were able to fish under the supervision and guidance of a Field Tech guide. After touring the SMESL, the children were taken back to the Field Tech room where they were surrounded by everything from pythons to parrots. Upon completion of the tour the children had gained a new understanding of their surroundings.

Behaviorism

Students explore vast reaches of the human mind with investigation of sociological and psychological

by Stacey Heeg

Many students would not have been caught dead wearing the same outfit two days in a row, or acting like a polite stranger in their own home. Those students enrolled in sociology did these things and more in order to investigate the behavior of others around them.

Psychology and sociology were closely related in that both were a behavioral study, yet differed in that sociology was a study of group behavior, while psychology was a study of individual behavior. Both courses were popular among students because they counted as one half of a credit towards the required social studies credits, without concentrating on history. "Between ages sixteen to eighteen people become interested in their behavior as well as others around them," said Miss Sheila Norton, Psychology teacher, about the popularity of the two classes.

In psychology, students studied theories of personality, Freudian psychology, behaviorism, and abnormal psychology. The sociology curriculum consisted of society studies, families, female and male sex roles, status, devients in crime, minorities, and conformity. The students were also required to do original research on a topic of their choice. Tiffany Pettijohn, sr., investigated "Whether or not a senior's self esteem had anything to do with their dislike towards freshmen after the change to a four year high school."

Psychology and sociology aided students in understanding the actions and reactions resulting from the increasingly complex situations encountered in high school days and throughout their lives.

After learning office and retailing skills students were ready to gain profitable experience while working

On-the Job

by Mary Beth Burwinkle

As one walked into the classroom the familiar sights and sounds of students dozing to lectures or hurrying to write a note before the end of the hour were not present. The atmosphere in the Office Education room was one that might be found in a successful business office. Through completing several jobs, students in the Office Ed. I program were introduced to six office machines which they learned how to operate. The Office Ed. program was kept up to date by having on hand the most technically advanced machines available for the students' use. The school received four new computers, plus a hard disk drive and modum to help educate the students.

After completing Office Ed. I, students received actual On-the-Job training if enrolled in the Office Ed. II Program. "One of the best things about the program is the actual work experience which the student will benefit from throughout his lifetime," explained Mrs. Loralie Wilson, the course's instructor.

While Office Ed. students were learning to be efficient secretaries, the Marketing and Retailing students were learning the skills needed for a successful career in sales. The program, taught by Mrs. Debbie Santa Maria, had nearly tripled in size since last year, with over 90 students participating. "All units that are taught in Marketing and Retailing are practical. One of the very important units during the year concerns preparing perfect resumes and teaching students what questions the boss will ask at an interview," explained Mrs. Santa Maria.

Students also became very involved in DECA, Distributive Education Clubs of America, an extra-curricular Club of Marketing and Retailing. In the club, students applied skills they learned in Marketing towards their own interests. The skills learned in these courses will be beneficial in the working world

Upon entering the Auto Tech. room, one encountered the roaring of machines, and voices calling for that special tool needed to fix the engine properly. "It sure saves money on repairs!" explained Mike Himegarner, sr. But saving money was not the only advantage of taking the course. Knowing that one was able to successfully fix the car if it suddenly broke down helped a person to feel safer about driving long distances alone.

In Auto Tech. I the students learned the skills needed in order to be a good mechanic. "The first year is kind of slow because we have to do all bookwork," Bob Waldorf, jr., explained. But the bookwork was essential because in Auto Tech. II, students used their knowledge by actually fixing cars crying for attention.

In order to put one's knowledge to work on fixing cars properly, one should first know how to drive it. Drivers Education taught students proper driving techniques.

One of the goals for the Drivers Ed teachers was to obtain a car with a stick shift. Commenting on other goals, Mr. Bob Oden, one of the instructors, said, "Right now, our major goal is to get to June 1!"

In both Auto Tech. and Drivers Ed. students learned techniques applied in day to day situations in their lives.

Students expressed themselves through different art forms in a variety of classes. Work was done in a wide range of fields from drafting and wood in the Industrial Arts to drawing and photography in the Art Department.

Because of the switch to a four year high school, the Art Department underwent a few changes. Two new teachers arrived from the junior high level providing students with original insights. Mrs. Jeanne Hrabe, art teacher, liked her newly acquired position because she "enjoy(s) working with older students." Another big change involved the alteration of Art I to a semester course, Art Exploration. The change was made to get students into advanced classes at a faster pace. Michelle Roberts, sr., approved of the idea of making it a semester class. "It (Art I) was so drawn out as a year class. The material was simplistic enough to be done in a shorter time span." Classes such as this readied students for advanced courses.

Photography II was an advanced art class which offered students more in-depth training. Mr. Guy Malone, head of the Fine Arts Department and a Photography II teacher, explained how the beginning class, Photography I, differed from the advanced Photography II course. "Photography II extends and takes beyond the concepts of beginning classes. Different chemicals, techniques, and papers are used to conceive a more detailed picture." The Photography II students participated in six different competitions throughout the year which they did very well in.

No matter which art class a student chose to take either inborn talents were developed or for others a new talent was discovered.

Walking into room 233 early in the morning always provided one with either an earpiercing or inspiring experience. As instruments were being tuned, sounds as equally pleasant as fingers running down a chalkboard enveloped the room. But once the students' movements were synchronized, the sound was soothing to those who passed by.

The year provided much excitement in the string orchestra as many highly rated students returned from the previous year and were ready to repeat their performances at the district, regional, and state level competitions.

The thirty-piece orchestra, under the direction of Mrs. Mary-Lou Jones, played almost exclusively classical music. Jones explained that, "It (classical music) is challenging and the students like good literature." The group was joined later in the year by thirty new members completing the orchestra with a horn section. The newly formed orchestra provided music for the winter musical "Fiddler on the Roof."

Many special competitions were planned throughout the year. For individual talents, the district try-outs took place in early October in Lawrence while the actual performance took place later in the month. The entire orchestra participated at the state competition which took place at Shawnee Mission East High School in April. The group also participated in Honors Orchestra which involved schools from all over Kansas and Missouri. Acceptance into the Honors Orchestra relied heavily on teacher recommendations. Chris O'Brien, sr., stated his feelings on how the competitions helped him. "I hope with all my high school experience, I will continue playing with the orchestra when I go to college next year."

A, B, C, D, E, F, G . . . Just as there are many notes in a measure of music, South offered students a wide variety of musical opportunities. A different choir class was offered each hour. "Choir class is a product on public display like the newspaper or yearbook, but our product is sound," commented Mrs. Marie Lerner-Sexton, the choir teacher.

The Concert choir included freshmen and sophomores who participated in school concerts along with community events. This choir served as a beginning step toward the advanced choirs. As part of their training, the group was exposed to the different aspects of music. For instance, they saw a performance by Alvin Ailey. Another activity included exchanges with other schools. This enabled the choir to hear other comparable choirs and also the chance to perform for people of their own age.

A select number of the Concert Choir were chosen to form the Freshmen/Sophomore Mixed Ensemble. the group met before school three days a week to practice for their various performances.

The junior/senior girls' choir, Chanticleers, were busy this year. They organized a fundraiser of selling and making pizzas. Local organizations contacted Mrs. Lerner-Sexton to have this choir perform. The Flag Team Show was also fortunate to have the Chanticleers perform.

A larger choir consisting of upperclassmen was A Cappella. This choir went on a tour to Heston, Kansas. There they saw the internationally famous, King Singers from England. On January 22, they sang "Requiem" by Faure at the Masterworks Concert. This musical piece was sung in celebration of its 100th birthday. "It's such a privilege to be asked to perform in a piece of such historic significance. For me, it is an honor that I'll remember for a long time," said Ben Russ, jr., a first year member of A Cappella Choir.

The Heritage Singers were selected from the A Cappella Choir. One of their community concerts included performing at the 125th birthday of Kansas at the State Fair held in Hutchinson. Choirs came from all over the state to sing in the "Sing Out Kansas" section of the event. In February, the choir was one of only nine to entertain in Wichita at the Kansas Music Educators association Meeting for music teachers from all over Kansas. To finish the year, the Heritage Singers performed at the Drill Team Show.

South's Barber shop Quartet also participated in school concerts and community events. The four boys practiced every Monday evening at six o'clock.

No matter which choir a student was in, they all pulled together to raise funds for the European trip taken every three years. This summer from June 14 to June 28th, these students will perform spiritual and folk songs all over Holland, Belguim, Germany, England, and Luxembourg in churches for nearby townspeople. Along with singing, the choir will have time for shopping and sightseeing. To help pay for the trip, many fundraisers were needed. The Plumber Family, a country-western singing group, arrived from the Ozarks on March 8 for a performance to help raise money. Other fundraisers included pizza-bakes, selling candy, and a garage sale. "The planning of the European trip and fundraisers went well. The parents supported us immensely and everyone is excited and looking forward to the experience," remarked a participant of the Choir's European tour, Lisa Dietrich, jr.

Walking through the front door, one begins their journey into the twilight zone. Turn left and float down the corridor until another is found. Once again, take a left past the choir room to yet the most mysterious of all hallways. Keep going and listening for the music. The tones are coming from the band room. It's sound covers a multitude of ranges. It is here that South's bands work hard at being the best.

How does one become a student of the band? In November, the members of the marching band auditioned. They performed two exercises which were the District's standard try-out material. Their ability divided them into two—Symphonic and Concert Band. Due to the increase of students this year, the Concert Band was brought back into exsistence.

A select number of these two bands comprise South's jazz band. The band focused on jazz/rock band swing styles. The group's function included playing at community events and at a special evening. May 16 was the lucky date for everyone in the community to enter the band dimension at the Evening of Jazz.

The highlight of the symphonic band's year was working towards their trip overseas. The sixteen day tour included outdoor concerts and festivals throughout England and Germany. To earn money, students sold the "Millionaire of Overland Park" game. In addition each student had to pay a thousand dollars. "We're really looking forward to the trip especially since every band member is like a member of a big family," commented Andi Milens, jr.

Not only did South experience the addition of the concert band, but also a new instructor, Mr. Steve Adams. "The students at South are motivated to be good as a whole band and on an individual basis. It makes my job exciting and contributes to the improvements of the band," said Adams.

So, with Adams leading the way, the bands entered the dark auditorium to bring all into the band dimension.

The lights were dimmed and the audience settled back into their seats. There was total darkness and silence. The spot light flashed on the stage and for a short period of time the spectators entered a different time and place.

Repertory Theater once again provided audiences with a vast repertoire. The fall play was the Diviners, and the musical was Fiddler on the Roof. The rep shows were Alice in Wonderland, Agnes of God, The Elephant Man, and Inherit the Wind.

Because of the change to a four year high school, sophomores, as well as juniors and seniors, were allowed to be in Rep Theater. To tryout, students had to prepare and perform a monologue. After this a call back list was compiled and those students were interviewed by the senior crew chiefs. They ranked the applicants on their attitude, reliability, and Mr. Mark Swezey's talent rating. The company usually consisted of sixty people.

"Most people who make Rep Theater think it is going to be an acting paradise, but up until about mid March most of the company's time is spent building sets, designing programs, and sweeping floors," said Heather Wood, sr. The hard work and long hours put into every production was clearly visible. The programs, advertisements, sets, costumes, and performances all had an air of professionalism. Because of this the theater department was successful in providing it's audiences with high-quality entertainment.

The scene: a classroom full of desks, chairs, and a special black board. What is so unique about this board?? Written along the outside border are the words, "Let it be resolved that the Federal Government should implement a comprehensive long term agricultural policy in the United States." These words may have no significance to you, but to the thousands of debaters, including those from South, across the nation, they have great meaning. For them, this is the topic chosen to be the country's debate question throughout the year.

At a tournament, each two person debate team faced five or six other teams. They used the power match schedule in which teams debated other teams with the same win/loss record. "Through the many debates presented in one tournament, a student gains much experience in speaking, poise, and articulation," commented Mr. William Robinson, debate sponsor.

Each debator was given a limited amount of time to prepare his case. "You learn to get information quickly and organize yourself. You also learn to think under pressure," said Lisa Overholser, sr. To prepare themselves for each hour and a half debate, the students brought with them files they had prepared in class. These files contained government documents and quotes from books, magazines, and newspapers. The debator's case was either that he agreed with the current plan or that he proposed an alternative method. A file was always useful in preparing oneself and a partner at a tournament.

Pat Warren, sr., summed up the importance of debating. "Debating allows you to know a great deal about a specific topic. It also teaches you to organize your thoughts into a logical argument. This can be useful in the future."

The scene ended with smiles on everyone's faces as they heard the news that Pat Warren and Mike Hurwitz made it to National competition. They will compete in June in Ohio.

It was now his turn. While quickly running through his lines one last time, he nervously wiped his sweaty palms on his wool slacks and cleared his throat. He stepped up in front of the judges and began his oration. Forensics students often found themselves in a similar situation.

Preparing for a Forensics competition required much time and effort. Preparation began in Forensics I where the students learned about all of the different events and rules that are involved in a competition. The students then researched and experimented with each event to find out which area they would excel in.

Forensics II was taught only during second semester so that students could compete in the Forensics tournaments which were held on Saturdays during the Spring semester. Each day in class students continually practiced while their coach, Mrs. Cathy McNamara, listened intently to critique their work.

In the Spring, students traveled to many different places and competed against students from other schools. Forensics students were assigned to a tournament by coach McNamara only one week prior to the tournament.

Commenting on his feelings about Forensics, John Bartel, sr., said, "It's a lot of hard work, but you get to display your hard work in front of people so it makes it all worthwhile."

A combination of fitness and fun was provided to those students who saw the opportunity to enhance their physical well-being. The freshmen also participated in this experience, although gym class was a requirement for them. Mr. Jim Pickernell, a new gym teacher at South this year, found the upperclassmen to be more cooperative in their classes in comparison to the freshmen who were only allowed to take the required gym courses.

Dance, Aerobics, Weight Training, Lifetime Sports and Team Games were the course offerings sophomores, juniors and seniors had to choose from. Although Dance and Aerobics were open to all students, only girls signed up for them. Mrs. Debra McEndarffer, gym instructor, commented on the all girl courses. "This is the first year the classes haven't been co-ed. They (boys) were discouraged from signing up for these classes. In the past, most boys enjoyed the class." On the other hand, Weight Training attracted enough girls to schedule one full class including only girls. "It (an all girl class) takes half the fun out of it," said Robyn Cordry. Lifetime Sports involved activities at different levels of skill and stamina for people who enjoyed individual athletic events. The final choice, Team Games, involved activities like football, soccer, and speedball which require more than two people to be played.

In all five elective classes, students worked at the key purpose of maintaining their personal fitness.

Communicate

by Karyn Poznick

Watch out ABC, NBC, CBS and local radio stations—you have got competition! KSMS is here to put you in your place. Students received excellent training through courses offered in radio and TV broadcasting.

Many students auditioned for positions on the KSMS television crew late last spring. Of these, fourteen were selected to represent the school. Together, they produced a monthly cable, and bi-monthly school show. "The school show was new this year and I think it gave students a better understanding of what KSMS-TV represents," commented Nancy Frederick, sr.

On the shows, there were two anchors, two sportscasters, and the rest of the students reported on various feature topics. The students rotated positions after each show, allowing them to experience each facet of creating a television show. "I consider myself lucky to have had such an experience at South. I will now have to wait two or three years to be in front of the camera again," said Tina Kingsbury, sr.

For radio lovers, KSMS provided a high quality program. The radio station aired each day during all three lunches. There were nine students who made up the team of DJs.

A team of two DJs was in charge of each lunch period. The teams rotated and were usually on the air two to three times a week. The day of the week was the basis on which the team selected their music. On Monday through Wednesday, the format included one request, one oldie, one party, one Top Five, and one metal tune. Students could write down their five favorites to make a "Perfect Album" for Thursday. An open format was followed on Fridays.

The school year was set to the beat produced by KSMS radio and television. Students were always well-informed and appreciative of what the call letters, KSMS, had to offer.

Inside beat

Journalism: an academic study concerned with the collection and editing of news, or the management of a news medium. This definition just barely described the hard work, investigation, and long hours put forth by the 1986-87 Patriot newspaper staff. Providing the student body with a high-quality, informative paper was no easy task. Yet strongly dedicated to their responsibility, the staff worked diligently in order to provide consciencious and sincere coverage of important events.

Two changes aided the staff greatly in the production of an excellent paper. The first was a reduction in the size of the staff, enabling the members to work together more closely while brainstorming for topics. The other was an extended deadline. In years past the paper was put out every two weeks, but this year it was distributed every three weeks. This allowed the staff more opportunity to bring each edition to a point of perfection.

"Each staff member brings a necessary and unique angle to our newspaper. We need those fresh, inventive ideas. I love it when the reporters can involve themselves in a beat for which they exhibit genuine curiosity," stated Stacy Hinthorn, sr., about the quality of the staff.

The few days before deadline were typical of any newspaper. After staff members put the finishing touches on their articles, the editors scanned them meticulously for mistakes. Layouts were put together with precision, giving them a clean-cut appearance, attractive to the reader's eye. The paper not only looked professional, it sounded professional. The news articles, columns, features, and editorials included various views and opinions presented by vast personalities.

Barry Maupin, sr., addressed the Little Assembly, Catillion issue, in his editorial, "Dance Clubs Show Prejudice."

"I wrote the article because I wanted to bring the issue out into the open. Club members knew all along that Blacks and Jews were not in the groups, but nobody ever seemed to question their exclusion. The whole thing was so hushed up, and I thought it was time that the public became aware of the grave fact that prejudice still exists in our society. Everyone was afraid to admit it," commented Maupin.

Through such journalistic endeavors as this article and many others, the Patriot staff intrigued its readers' minds and provided them with new and interesting insights.

Capturing the idea of change and setting it to one main symbolic theme was a task which the 1986-87 Heritage Editors managed with determination. The editorial staff was under the leadership of Editor-in-Chief, Rob Weiss, sr., who developed the opening and closing sections as well as the division pages. Weiss, with the help of Mrs. Linda Barber, yearbook sponsor, made sure deadlines were met with high-quality work and efficiency.

The copy and photographs depicted a year of change as well as the traditional spirit which enveloped the sporting events, special organizations, classrooms, and hallways of South.

The Heritage Staff as a whole was broken down into seven smaller staffs. Each staff was led by a section editor and was dedicated to covering one particular aspect of South.

The sports editor was Jenny Barenberg, sr. She and her staff covered the sporting events, providing copy which captured the vigor and excitement of athletic competition. Heading the organizations staff was Lisa Colombano, sr. This section covered clubs and teams, from Categories to Flag Team.

Shanna Foster, sr., led her staff in producing the mini-mag "Attitudes."

"A yearbook does not have to be formal and calculated all the time. The Student Life Staff realized that there are a lot of fun, creative, colorful things to do with a layout. Basically we tried to do things a little left of center," said Foster.

The academics staff, under the leadership of Stacey Heeg, sr., provided an inside look at the wide assortment of classes and departments. Ads were in great demand and Alisa Attardi, sr., along with her staff worked dilligently to please each advertiser. The Photography staff, led by Scott Ogg, sr., had the ever important job of getting just the right picture to capture the diversity of the year on film.

The student body, headed by Rachel Rubin, sr., took on the monumental job of sorting through and identifying each student picture.

Clearly, with the addition of the freshman class and the development of many new programs the staff was able to provide the student body with an encompassing view of a wider spectrum.

A Spectrum of Faces

. . . our locker partners, the guy in our third hour class that just wouldn't shut up, the person in our fourth hour class that kept telling us to shut up, the freshmen, that guy in the uniform who wouldn't let us park in visitor parking, the teacher who could even make Shakespeare interesting, the sophomores, the teacher who couldn't even make winning the lottery sound exciting, the people we went to lunch with, the administrator who invited us to spend a Saturday at school, the juniors, our coach who was convinced that running that extra lap was the solution to all of life's problems, that same coach who helped us reach new levels of success, thrashers, conformists, conforming thrashers, thrashing conformists, the girl that rear-ended us in the parking lot, our chemistry partners who accidentally spilled the mystery chemical on our arms, our parents who went out of town, our neighborhood Cliffs Notes dealer, that eloquent voice on the morning announcements, our prom dates, the people who jump-started our cars when we left our lights on, the hall monitors, everyone who threw hundreds of superballs from the bleachers during the pep assembly, the seniors, the same lady working at Winchell's every time we made a donut run . . .

These are the people we will remember the most from the spectrum of faces which made our year unique.

Officers Show Unity

—Jennifer Stein

Splat! With whipped cream completely covering his face, Jay Ruf was recognized at the pep rally as the first freshman class president in the history of South. Also elected were David Gochis, vice president; Katie Brandt, secretary; and Alycia Wright, treasurer. Their sponsors who helped plan an eventful year were Miss Marianne Tinkler and Mr. Bob Herdt.

During their meetings, the officers planned parties, a lock-in, and other activities that displayed their spirit and made their first year at South a memorable one. To recognize the freshmen involved in various school activities, the officers also organized freshmen rallies held before classes.

David Gochis said, "I feel that this year will be most challenging because we are the first freshman class, and we have to prove that we are also a part of the school."

The officers executed their roles in student government with enthusiasm, making the year a great success.

Set Loose At South

—Suzanne Miller

Nearly half of the student body flocked into the auditorium, filling the seats. Both the Freshmen and Sophomore classes were invited to attend the Raider Rally, an event to prepare underclassmen for the "high school experience."

Barry Maupin, sr., added, "Mostly, the rally helped orient the freshmen and sophomores as to how things are really run at this school, what customs are followed, and what kinds of behavior are acceptable, because these are the things that cause their fears."

A comedian began the evening, followed by question and answer sessions headed by junior and senior volunteers. Tanya Evans, fr., said, "The students told us a little bit about what seniors would do—they'd probably push us around."

Other activities included a tour of the school, dinner in the cafeteria, entertainment by the cheerleaders, a breakdancer, and a casual dance to close the evening.

Although some underclassmen would disagree, the Second Annual Raider Rally did prove to be successful in accomplishing its objectives in an entertaining manner.

Fledglings Form 1st Impressions

—Rachel Rubin

A high school enrolled with over 2000 students was quite intimidating for freshmen leaving the security of junior high. Many freshmen left the nest with hopes for more freedom. But most did not exactly know what to expect, since South was previously so far removed from Nallwood and Indian Creek.

So when asked of their first impressions of South, freshmen gave a diversity of responses.

"I didn't know anyone, and I didn't think I'd find my way around," said Todd Norem, fr.

"There is more freedom in high school. I like going out to lunch. But the teachers expect more out of us," said Shelli Altman, fr.

"I heard about this big kid stuffing a freshman into a locker," said Matt Culp, fr.

"I had heard stories about seniors beating up freshmen, but I found out it wasn't true. But seniors like to pound on us a little harder," said Richard Warsnak, fr.

"Thinking about school depressed me," said Culp.

"I didn't feel quite as alone since the sophomores were new, too," said Warsnak.

Ruf Ruf, Quack Quack

—Carol Kim

No, it's not a duck; it's Jay Ruf, fr., imitating one. Ruf has participated in duck calling contests, and his biggest win was in October this year. Not only was he the state champion, but he was also the youngest winner from Kansas.

This unique past-time began at the age of nine when Ruf, hunting with his dad, learned how to attract ducks by duplicating their sounds with a caller made of wood or ivory. Ruf said, "It takes a strong diaphram. You just don't blow into it; you have to grunt."

How successful was Ruf at hunting with his handy caller? Apparently it worked. Throughout the hunting season at Swatt Creek, Missouri, Ruf carried home numerous game.

His most memorable event was competing at nationals in Struttgart, Arkansas, last fall. "The competition was tough, but I was excited to be there," said Ruf.

Exchange Sends Teens Abroad

—Jennifer Stein

Bonjour! Hola! Guten Tag! These were some of the greetings students received as they began their journey into new lands as AFS students. The students lived with a family and experienced the country's everyday life, which was often quite contrasting from their own.

Dana Berey, jr., an AFS student to Belgium last summer, said, "Adjusting to a different family, culture, and life was difficult at first. You just have to keep an open mind and everything works out."

Another way students became involved with the AFS program was to host an exchange student. Catherine O'Neill, jr., an AFS student to Columbia, and Berey both returned home from their adventures to be hosts. Grace Zamora, sr., from Panama, lived with the Berey's this year, and Andrea Wind, sr., from Germany, stayed at the O'Neill's. It was difficult for them to adjust to American life.

Evidently, being an exchange student, host, or both was a challenge at first, but the fun and memories definitely made the experience worthwhile.

STAYING ALIVE: THE ULTIMATE SURVIVAL GAME (For over 2000 players)

Object of Game: In five minutes or less, players must advance from class to class.

Game Preparation: At least five minutes before the bell rings, players must gather books prior to dashing out the door.

To Play the Game: Players must walk briskly out the door and march directly to their next class. Occasional visits to Free Parking (lockers) may decrease players' chances of winning. Obstacles such as stray skateboards and masses of other players must be overcome.

Winning the Game: The game ends at the sound of the tone as players must be seated quietly in their desks.

For Advanced Players Only:

1) Follow the same rules while using crutches.
2) Obtain a locker next to the gym.

Party Animals Rule Weekends.

—Carol Kim

—Hey, what's up?
—A party.
—When?
—This weekend.

The bell rang at 2:40 on Friday, indicating the end of school and the beginning of the weekend. It was time to relax and push aside all work and pressures. Students lived for the weekends. This was the perfect time to meet their friends at a perfect place . . . a party.

"It's a place to be with friends," said Shelly Staus, sr.

"You meet new people and old friends there, until the cops bust it up," Ellen Flatt, sr., added.

"A party is a great place to practice the art of socializing. To put it simply, what would teenagers do without parties?" Nancy Urbanski, sr., responded.

"Parties are going out with a group of friends and having a good time without worrying about anything else. They're practically my life," said Brent Kort, soph.

Ten o'clock on Sunday night, students looked at their desks stacked with homework.

—Oh well, forget it. I'll finish it tomorrow.

Sophs. Add A Classy Touch

—Carol Kim

As 500 sophomores poured into the auditorium, Mr. Keith Allen, sponsor, called attention to their first class meeting in the school's history. The purpose was to recognize the candidates running for sophomore class officers.

After a week of seeing posters of "Vote for . . . ," the sophomore class listened to the polished speeches of the candidates asking for last minute support. Students relied on their loyalty to their former Junior Highs, and by word of mouth in choosing from the candidates.

Those who rallied enough support were Lesley Swender, president; Elizabeth Kim, vice president; Monica Turner, treasurer; and Monica Wood, secretary.

"I was excited about winning but sad because I ran against a good friend," said Wood.

"It was embarrassing to have a pie land on my face during the assembly," said Swender.

The officers' expectations were high. Kim said, "We hope to excite our class and become involved in more activities. We might even start some new traditions."

We're In The Money!

—Suzanne Miller

The thoughts of London streets and Parisian shops motivated many of the music students to hold fundraisers throughout the year.

Marching band sold "Millionaire of Overland Park" games, similar to Monopoly, except with scenes of Overland Park in the middle of the board, and local businesses as advertisers. The games sold for $13, and profits totalled over $12,000.

A Cappella Pelicans also planned fundraisers for their summer trip to Europe. They made and sold pizzas early in the year, then held a Sale-o-Rama in the school's cafeteria to help meet a goal of $100,000 set by SACPAC (South A Cappella Parents Club.)

Although selling things could sometimes be a frustrating experience, it had a very important function at South. Heather Hamtil, sr., said, "By fundraising, students are able to pay for activities that would be unaffordable otherwise."

Aside from the music groups making money, many other organizations sold candy, flowers, and other popular items throughout the year. The cheerleaders, yell-leaders, French students, and S.A.D.D. (Students Against Driving Drunk) all sold the most common, and probably the most popular candy at South—M&M's.

SADD Promotes Awareness

—Shawna Rosen

"I started SADD because I was tired of reading about teenagers getting killed in drunk-driving accidents," said Kamala Crawford, sr., organizer of Students Against Driving Drunk.

Members of SADD tried to make students realize how dangerous it was to drive drunk. "I want to increase awareness so that people will think twice before getting behind the wheel when they are drunk," said Crawford.

Assemblies were held to educate the freshmen about preventing themselves or their friends from driving under the influence. "I hope we make the freshmen more aware about drinking and driving," said Andrea Berthelsen, jr.

The freshmen, however, were not the only educational focus. SADD tried to teach the whole student body with shocking posters and newspaper ads. "When you know someone is going to drive when they've been drinking, don't let them. Offer to drive for them, or find them another ride," said Jamie White, jr.

Hoping to get their message across, SADD's members planned non-alcoholic parties and brought in films and guest speakers to emphasize their position. "If we keep at least one person from driving drunk, we will have accomplished our goal," said Kelly Frederichs, sr., publicity chairman.

Enthusiasm Spreads Spirit

—Suzanne Miller

"Gee whiz, why is everyone wearing KU sweatshirts? Hey, it must be Spirit Week!" Nearly every student at South, as well as many teachers, participated in one way or another during the week.

College Sweatshirt Day, on Monday, October 20, began this STUCO-sponsored week, followed by Nerd Day and Pajama Day. Thursday was designated as Blue Valley Hick Day in honor of our opponents at Saturday night's Homecoming game. The school week culminated in a splattering of green, gold, and white throughout the stands at the all-school Pep Assembly on Friday.

The Pep Assembly seemed to be the climax of Spirit Week. Included on the program were performances by the gymnastics team and Flag Team and introductions of the Homecoming King and Queen candidates. The senior class, especially, displayed their enthusiasm in a mass hurdling of superballs from the top of the bleachers to the floor of the gymnasium.

Felicia Wasson, sr., said, "I think it was really cool how everyone seemed to have enough school spirit to dress up."

All in all, Spirit Week seemed to produce more spirit and excitement than in past years, and was the success for which STUCO had hoped.

Students Tackle Term Papers

—Shawna Rosen

Students of all grades were found camped out in libraries around Kansas City, not to be heard from for days.

Although most students found all term papers to be difficult, one paper stood out as being the most challenging. "Mr. Forbes' AP History paper was the hardest research paper I have done. It was the longest and it required the most effort," said Mike Russell, jr.

Other papers that were rated "most difficult" were Mr. Allen's sophomore Honors English paper and Dr. Hampton's Honors Biology project. "The Biology project was the hardest because I had to do a lot of technical research and spend a lot of time at school working on it," said Karen Burk, jr.

However, all students agreed on one thing; procrastination made a tough assignment even tougher. "I remember taking a lot of notes in a panic two days before the paper was due," reflected Jennifer Olsen, jr.

But with a little hard work, and some last minute retyping, most students finished their papers with enough time to recover (sleep, eat, talk on the phone) before their next paper was assigned.

Gift of Life Helps Others

—Jennifer Stein

Halloween this year was a disappointment for Dracula because he was not the one receiving blood.

The annual blood drive was held on October 31. For spirit day, students were dressed in costumes resembling celebrities ranging from Mickey Mouse to Max Headroom. Their blood was donated to the Kansas City Community Blood Bank for which STUCO successfully raised 146 pints of blood.

After a pint of blood was extracted from their bodies, donors felt both queasy and light headed. They ate cookies and drank pop while talking with friends. Donors felt a sense of accomplishment and were proud to display their "I gave blood" stickers showing their initiative in a serious situation.

The students had many reasons for donating blood. Mainly they wanted to help others who desperately need it. Kris Wilensky, sr., said, "Other people are going to need blood, and I want to be there for them. I feel it's a worthy cause." Susan Howard, sr., agreed, "I really want to help save others' lives."

The blood drive turned out to be a effective way for students to contribute to their own community.

Parties Abound On Pumpkin Day

—Rachel Rubin

Just how much would you pay to be scared out of your mind? People paid from 4 to 6 dollars for the thrill of their lives at haunted houses. Since trick-or-treating was obsolete in high school, most students opted for parties, haunted houses, or horror movies on Halloween night.

But not everyone was fortunate enough to have Halloween night off from work. Thousands of children and their parents flocked to Metcalf South and Oak Park Malls to receive goodies from the merchants within. So many lucky employees passed out candy that night. "I think the parents were more excited than the kids. I felt like I was making the kids' evenings memorable," said Rick Radakovich, sr.

Since October 31 happened to be a Friday night, people threw more parties than usual.

But Halloween has changed. Kids used to stay out for hours on cold rainy nights, eagerly awaiting a chance to count their candy. "I feel badly because the little kids don't have anything to look forward to. The holiday has lost its uniqueness," said Chris O'Brien, sr.

Jim Utt, sr., summed up his feelings about Halloween, "It's just another night to stay out late."

Bikers Spark A Tradition

—Jennifer Stein

And they're off! They're off with the start of a new club. Sally Koch, sr., and Jennifer Koch, fresh., started the biking club as a fun past time after school.

Students who wished to participate met in the senior parking lot on specified days with their bicycles. Then, off they would ride to various exciting sites around Kansas City. Besides riding, bikers also made new friends and renewed old acquaintances.

"It's a new sport and fun for travelling," said Koch. Trips to Westport, and Stanley, Kansas were just a couple of the routes bikers took for scenic rides. After reaching their destination, cyclists would take a break while relaxing in the sun.

The weather caused some inconveniences but was also helpful. As the cold weather set in, cycling came to a halt. It began again, though, in the spring when it was once more sunny and warm. Students planned races against other schools who also had similar clubs.

Students did not have to be professionals. If they enjoyed cycling, they went along for the exercise of a ride.

Class Officers Commit Time

—Shawna Rosen

The junior class officers had the difficult task of organizing Prom, but through their hard work and dedication, the annual formal dance was a huge success.

President Dan Gurley, Vice-President Brent Venneman, Treasurer Jody Kerwin, and Secretary Vikki Pardoll, jrs., spent Tuesday afternoons discussing and planning Prom with the selected Prom committee.

Regency Park was chosen as the location for the dance, and the date was set for May 9.

Although the first fundraiser was not very successful, the officers had additional ideas for acquiring funds. "We had to raise a lot of money for Prom, but by selling boxer shorts and holding the tape race, we managed to keep the admission price fairly low," said Kerwin. "It was hard to raise money early in the year, but then students realized how important funds were, and our later fundraisers were more successful," commented Pardoll.

"We tried to make the 1987 Prom exciting, and I think we succeeded. I think it turned out just as good or better than previous Proms," said Gurley.

Limited Space Causes Rush

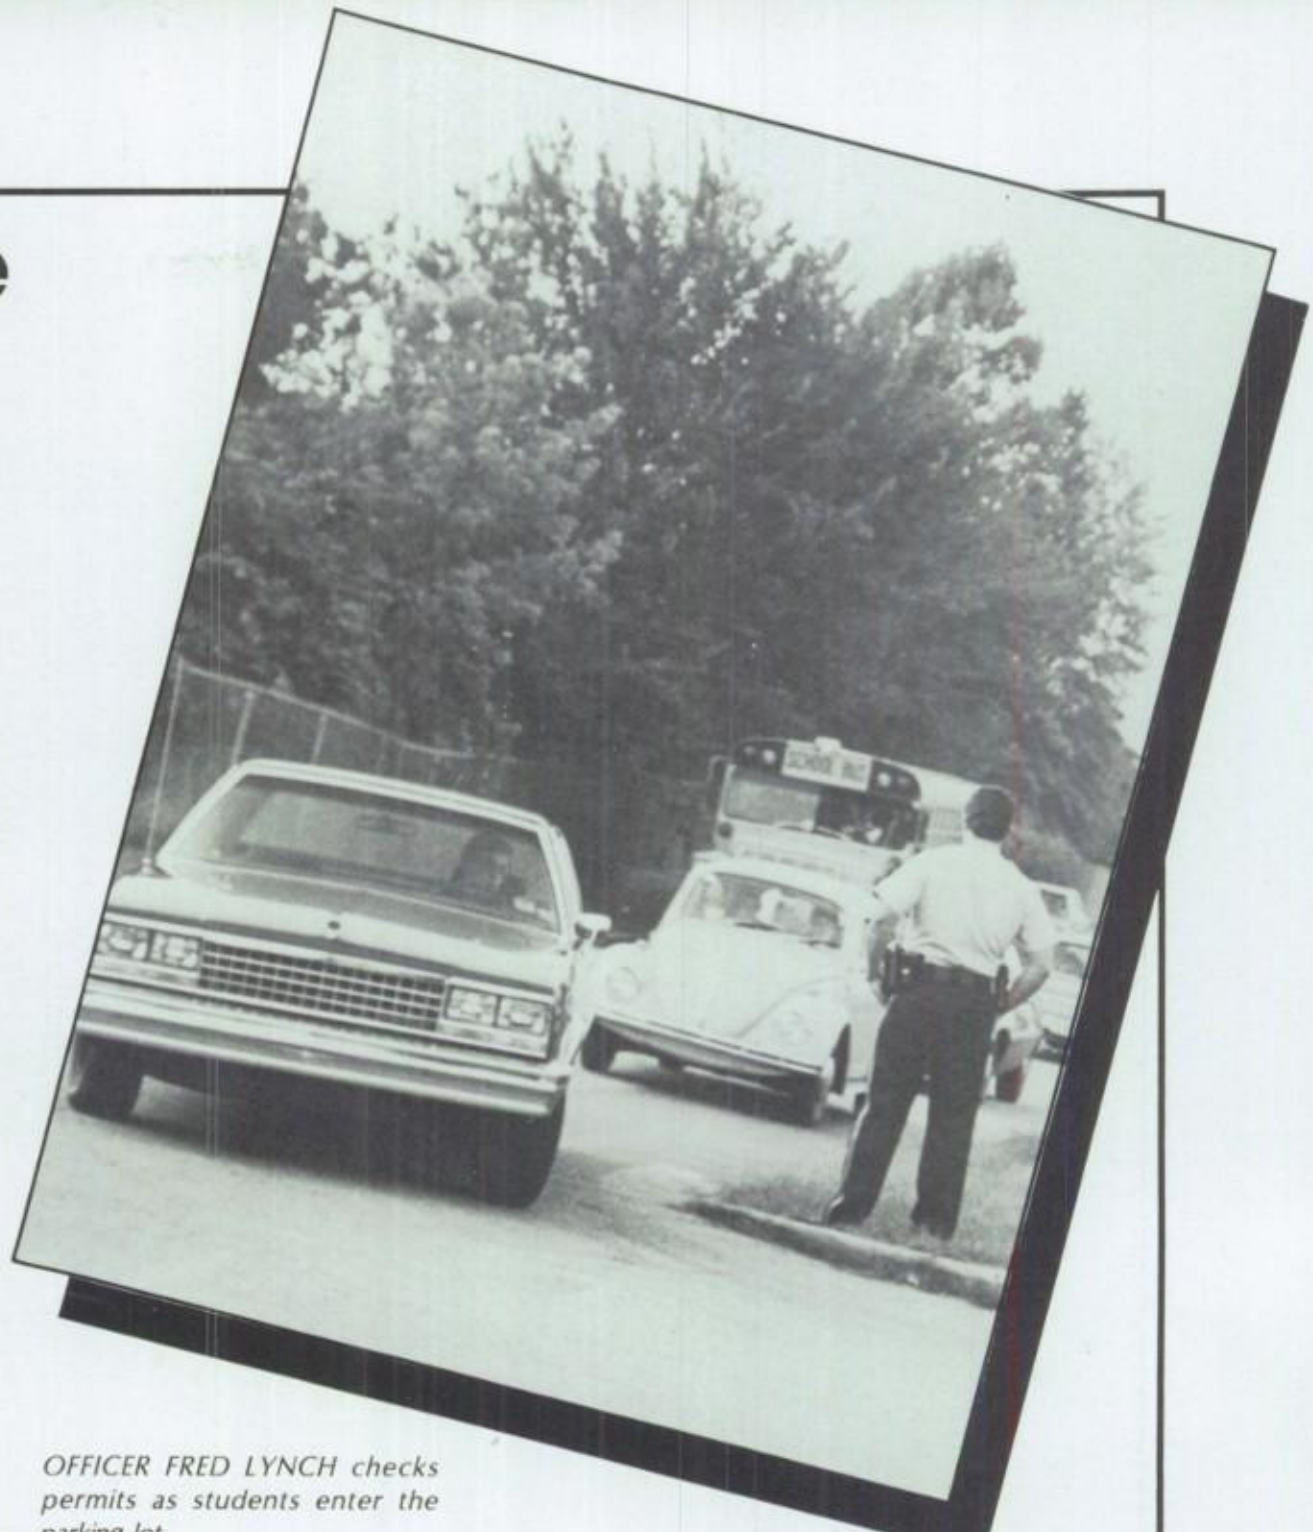
—Carol Kim

7:10 am—traffic jam. A congested, twisted line of cars extended from Nall to Lamar on 107th Street. Minutes ticked by, and yet the line had barely moved.

Traffic this year was heavier than before. Parents driving students to school, loaded buses, juniors and seniors all meshed into the chain of vehicles that were weaving to and fro in the parking lot.

The rent-a-cop, Officer Fred Lynch, blocked off the side entrance, disturbing the flow of traffic and stood by the only entrance checking for that familiar green parking permit which meant that "Yes, you paid ten dollars to park."

By 7:30 am, there were no parking spaces left. The stragglers who were running late had to make a mad dash to class from the sophomore parking lot.



OFFICER FRED LYNCH checks permits as students enter the parking lot.

Soccer Craze Kicks . . .

—Carol Kim

Glazed Faces, Mud Puppies, Why Be Normal, Dead Heads . . . what are these groups? They are soccer teams. The popular and growing sport of soccer has fascinated numerous students at South and offered new outlets to visit friends. These teams plus many others consist of students from South as well as ones from neighboring high schools.

With games during the weekdays, the teams met at soccer complexes like Just For Kicks, All American, and Johnson County Indoor Soccer Complex. Most players see it as a leisure sport with minimal competition.

"It's a fun way for my friends and I to get together on a weekday night," said Karen Cavanaugh, sr.

Forming their own teams allowed students to choose between an all-girl or boy team and a co-ed team. Each team played an average of ten games, and those teams with the best records participated in the end of the season tournament.

Duke Christofferson, sr., commented, "I keep in shape and still have a good time during the work week."

Park Ignites Controversy

—Shawna Rosen

Upon returning to school this year, smokers were shocked to discover that their park had been banned by the Board of Education. However, smokers still visited their beloved staircase by SMESL during lunch and between classes without regard for the new rule.

Both smokers and non-smokers felt that the Board was wrong to take the park away. "The school should not restrict students if they want to smoke," said Kristy Winegar, jr. Mike Sedovic, soph., voiced his opinion by saying, "I think we're adult enough to make our own decisions."

Some non-smokers thought that it should not be the school's decision if students could smoke. "People are going to smoke anyway. We might as well give them a place outside, so they don't do it inside," said Joybeth Scammahorn, jr. But since the no-smoking rule was not enforced by the administration, many students simply avoided the whole issue completely.

A group of students did, however, go up against the Board with some parental support to reinstate the park. "If they smoke outside in the park, there's no problem, but smoking inside the school bothers other people," commented Liz Burge, sr.

Don't You Hate It When . . .

—Suzanne Miller

Life can be frustrating, especially when everything seems to go wrong all at once. Then there are things that are a constant nuisance: pet peeves. For example, don't you hate it when . . .

you get food stuck in your teeth and nobody tells you.

you get behind a grandma driver.

people put you on hold and forget about you.

your telephone number is typed wrong in the directory.

you can't get out of the senior lot because people won't let you in line.

the teacher collects an assignment unexpectedly.

you're taking a test and the person next to you sniffles the whole time.

you answer the phone and someone else jumps on.

someone gets in front of you and slows down.

you fall asleep, and when you wake up there are red marks all over your face.

the answer of your math problem doesn't match the one in the back of the book.

the janitors never get around to fixing broken doors.

you're running late and you have to scrape off your windshield.

Mr. Wenger catches you in the hall.

you take your jeans out of the dryer and the button burns your belly.

Don't you hate it when that happens!

Don't You Love It When . . .

—Suzanne Miller

Ever have a day when everything goes just perfect? Ever have one of those experiences that makes your whole week? Don't you love it when . . .

you have no homework (because you weren't going to do it anyway.) you have a lot of lunch money.
you have a full tank of gas.
you get the last seat for a concert.
you find a twenty-dollar-bill in your coat pocket.
you're late to class and the teacher doesn't notice.
your sister lets you borrow her clothes.
the class beats Mrs. Turk in Trivial Pursuit.
you have a substitute teacher.
they cancel school on a gorgeous day.
you break curfew and your parents are asleep.
you don't have to work on the weekend.
the teacher leaves the room during a test.
you prove that Mike Hurwitz is wrong.
you do a chemistry lab without breaking or spilling anything.
Mr. Ruggles gives a "mini-lecture."
teachers admit they've made a mistake.
the first real snow falls.
you get a 24/50 on a calculus test.
the cops are wrong.
you don't study for a test and then you end up not having it.
your car starts in the morning.

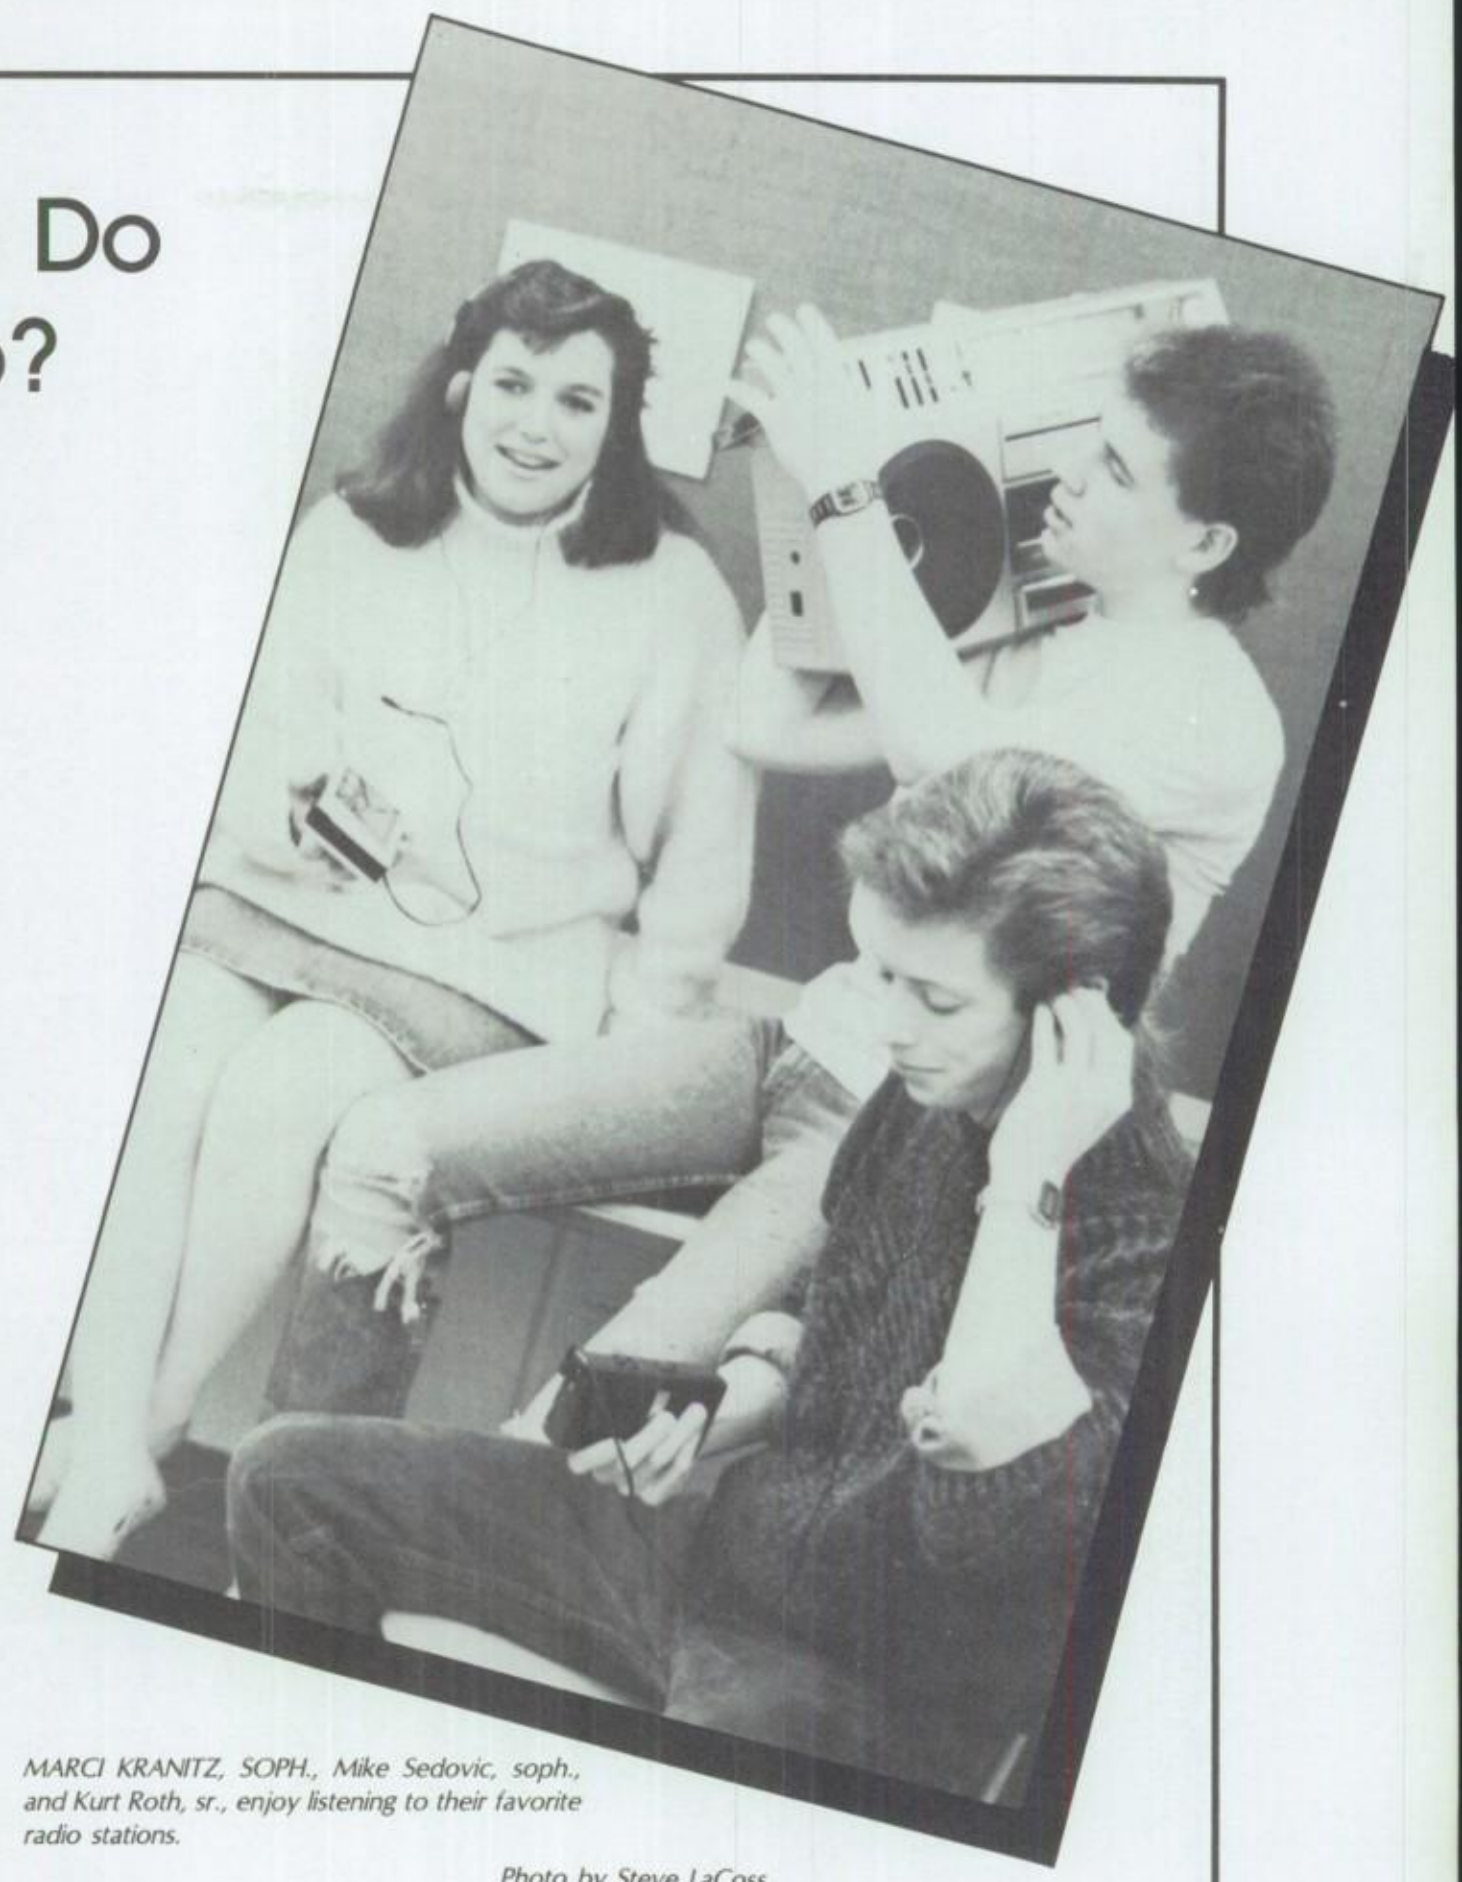
What Station Do You Listen to?

—Shawna Rosen

The majority of students listened to music, whether in their cars or at home. According to the 200 students polled, Q104 was the most popular radio station in Kansas City.

Although Q104 was the most popular among freshmen and sophomores, the juniors and seniors preferred KLZR (105.9), and KY102. "I like KLZR because it plays songs that other stations won't," said Hollie Siegel, sr. They (KLZR) play good, new music because it is a college station," said Bill Mehnert, jr. "The music on KY102 isn't computerized or too mellow; it's upbeat and optimistic," said Jennifer Cooper, fr.

Classic rock was introduced to Kansas City on KCFX (101 the Fox), and it received a significant number of votes. "I like classic rock because the beat is better, and you can hear what they are saying in the songs," said Marci Kranitz, soph. "Other radio stations overplay songs and wear them out, but KCFX has a larger selection, so you hear more variety while listening," said Susan Glennemeier, jr.



MARCI KRANITZ, SOPH., Mike Sedovic, soph., and Kurt Roth, sr., enjoy listening to their favorite radio stations.

Friendship Is Handmade

—Jennifer Stein

Year in and year out styles change, creating new fads. New ideas were picked up from around the world. Besides the new clothing styles, a recent idea has struck. Bracelets made of embroidery thread have circled teenagers' wrists and ankles. These bracelets were made by knotting the thread into different patterns. Thus, creating a colorful momento for a friend.

Using a different color each time, knots were made, producing different shapes. Rows of single colors were most popular. Triangles, squares, and diamonds were also common. Knotting all of the strings at once made a pattern that looked like beads.

Vicki Singer, sr., said, "The colors have their own meanings. Each color represents an emotion. Bracelets made of seven colors are a representation of each day of the week. The average bracelets, though, are made with three or four colors."

Near and far, many friends were tied together by friendship bracelets. Summer camp provided a comfortable atmosphere to make them. The bracelets were special for long distance friends since those friends rarely saw each other. Friendship bracelets were a way of expressing special feelings between friends while also creating a new fad to add to the changing styles of today.

STACI PARMET, JULIE Hodes and Dana Parelman, freshmen, make friendship bracelets after returning from a youth group convention.

Women Foot the Bill

—Rachel Rubin

To ask or not to ask, that was the question—the probing question all girls had to ask themselves one month prior to the Women Pay All dance on December 6.

And asking out a guy was not the easiest feat. Various methods of approaching guys were invented. Some used the more traditional but dreaded approach—the telephone call. Others looked for more creative tactics. "I asked for a volunteer to go with me to WPA, and this guy volunteered!" said Alicia Wright, fr. "I wrote him an invitation that went something like, 'I cordially invite you to attend WPA'," said Kris Leung, jr.

Speediness was also a factor in deciding whether or not to ask. "I decided on Thursday night that I'd ask him the next day. So I asked him before I had time to chicken out," said Sarah Turner, sr.

Just as on Prom night, couples commonly dined on the Plaza or downtown, exchanged flowers, and a few rented hotel rooms.

"I think most guys were more compassionate when they were approached because they have survived similar uncomfortable situations," said Peter Haxton, sr.

Spirited Seniors Lead the Way

-Suzanne Miller

For most people, ten years seems a long way off, but for the senior class officers the enormity of the ten-year reunion, their final responsibility, made the time span shrink a bit.

The senior class officers were unique in that they had all been mutual friends long before thoughts of working together arose. Mike Brandt served as president, Mark Kahler as vice-president, John Bartel as treasurer, and Liz Burge as secretary. "Mike, Mark, and I were all on the football team, and we all know Liz," said Bartel. The experience of working together as a team perhaps provided a unity among the officers, while past years' experiences in STUCO and other leadership positions throughout the school made these students qualified to lead their class.

Besides the ten-year reunion, the senior class officers organized graduation announcements, the senior class talent show, slide show, t-shirts, and after-prom as well as helping with cap and gown measurements. T-shirts, distributed before Spring Break, made the profit needed to make after-prom a success. While the senior class officers had no sponsor per se, the approval of Mr. Roach or Dr. Nichols was needed on most projects and ideas.

Seniors Plan Their Future

-Carol Kim

Applications, recommendations, essays and school transcripts—the fall and winter months were hectic for college-bound seniors as they searched for their "perfect" institution. Planning for the future ranked high among the other responsibilities given to them. The security of knowing which school to attend, which courses to take, and who would be there, no longer existed. Seniors now had to choose their own colleges.

College life did not please all students, though. A few opted to wait a few years while others went straight to work. But for most, selecting the right college was a crucial decision which took much time and consideration. Certain factors helped students to narrow their list of colleges.

"My family has to be able to afford it, and I don't want to leave home," said Gretchen Bridges, sr.

"You have to consider your abilities and see if the college offers courses that suit your needs," said Linda Overholser, sr.

"I like large universities within a vibrant city," said Mark Schaffer, sr.

Other factors were male to female ratio, Greek life, teacher to student ratio, selectivity, and quality of its departments. Once the choice was made, students eagerly awaited for the fall classes to commence.

Students Cram For Exams

-Shawna Rosen

As final exam time rolled around, the familiar tension and gloom hung in the air. Students suddenly found themselves needing to learn a semester's worth of material in less than a week.

The general attitude towards finals was nonchalant. "I don't study for finals because if you haven't learned it by the end of the semester, cramming won't help anyway," said Barb Gelb, sr. "I just go over my notes, listen to in-class reviews, and pray a lot," said Steph Schimins, jr.

Among students that did study, there were many different methods. "I put off studying until the night before finals, and then I cram with a passion," said Marci Kranitz, soph. "I start a week in advance and do a little every night, then I get a lot of sleep the night before the tests," reported Erin Augulis, jr.

Once final exams were over, students celebrated and relaxed. "My friends and I go out to a nice restaurant to reward ourselves for doing well on exams," said Lisa Williams, jr. "After finals I totally shut down all mental processes for a week regardless of whether I'm in school or not," said Ben Russ, jr.

Future grads face Last chances

—Rob Weiss

The ultimate goal for high school students is . . .
a) to party
b) to get 14 hours of sleep each day
c) to convince our parents to go to Mexico while we take care of the house
d) to graduate

The correct answer of course is d) to graduate. This one desire seemed simple enough, but seniors quickly encountered the many obstacles (including the desire to perform the other three choices) in the path leading to the culmination of their high school days.

Before school even started, senior pictures were taken at DeCloud Studios. Although students were given about six "last chances," many still found themselves begging for one more opportunity.

During homeroom, the Herff Jones Company distributed the order forms for graduation announcements and various other "festive paraphernalia."

As "Class of '87" tassles began to appear on rear view mirrors, it was obvious that cap and gown measurements had begun. Seniors were again given multiple "last chances" to be measured.

Graduation pictures indicated the final step before the actual ceremony. Bumper Landreth, sr., shared the general feeling of the Class when he said, "I was thinking, 'I shouldn't be a senior yet.' It's sad in a certain way that it is my last year, but I will be glad to move on and see what is in store for me in the future."

Jobs offer More than cash

—Rachel Rubin

Pizza Hut Delivery, Oak Park Plaza theater, the Jones' Store, Dillards, and Telecheck doled out minimum wage for minimal work.

But a handful of conscientious individuals opted for more rewarding, career-oriented jobs.

While hoping to make connections for medical school, Mike Greenfield, sr., served as a volunteer in Children's Mercy Hospital's neo-natal intensive care unit. He caught a fascinating glimpse of the medical profession.

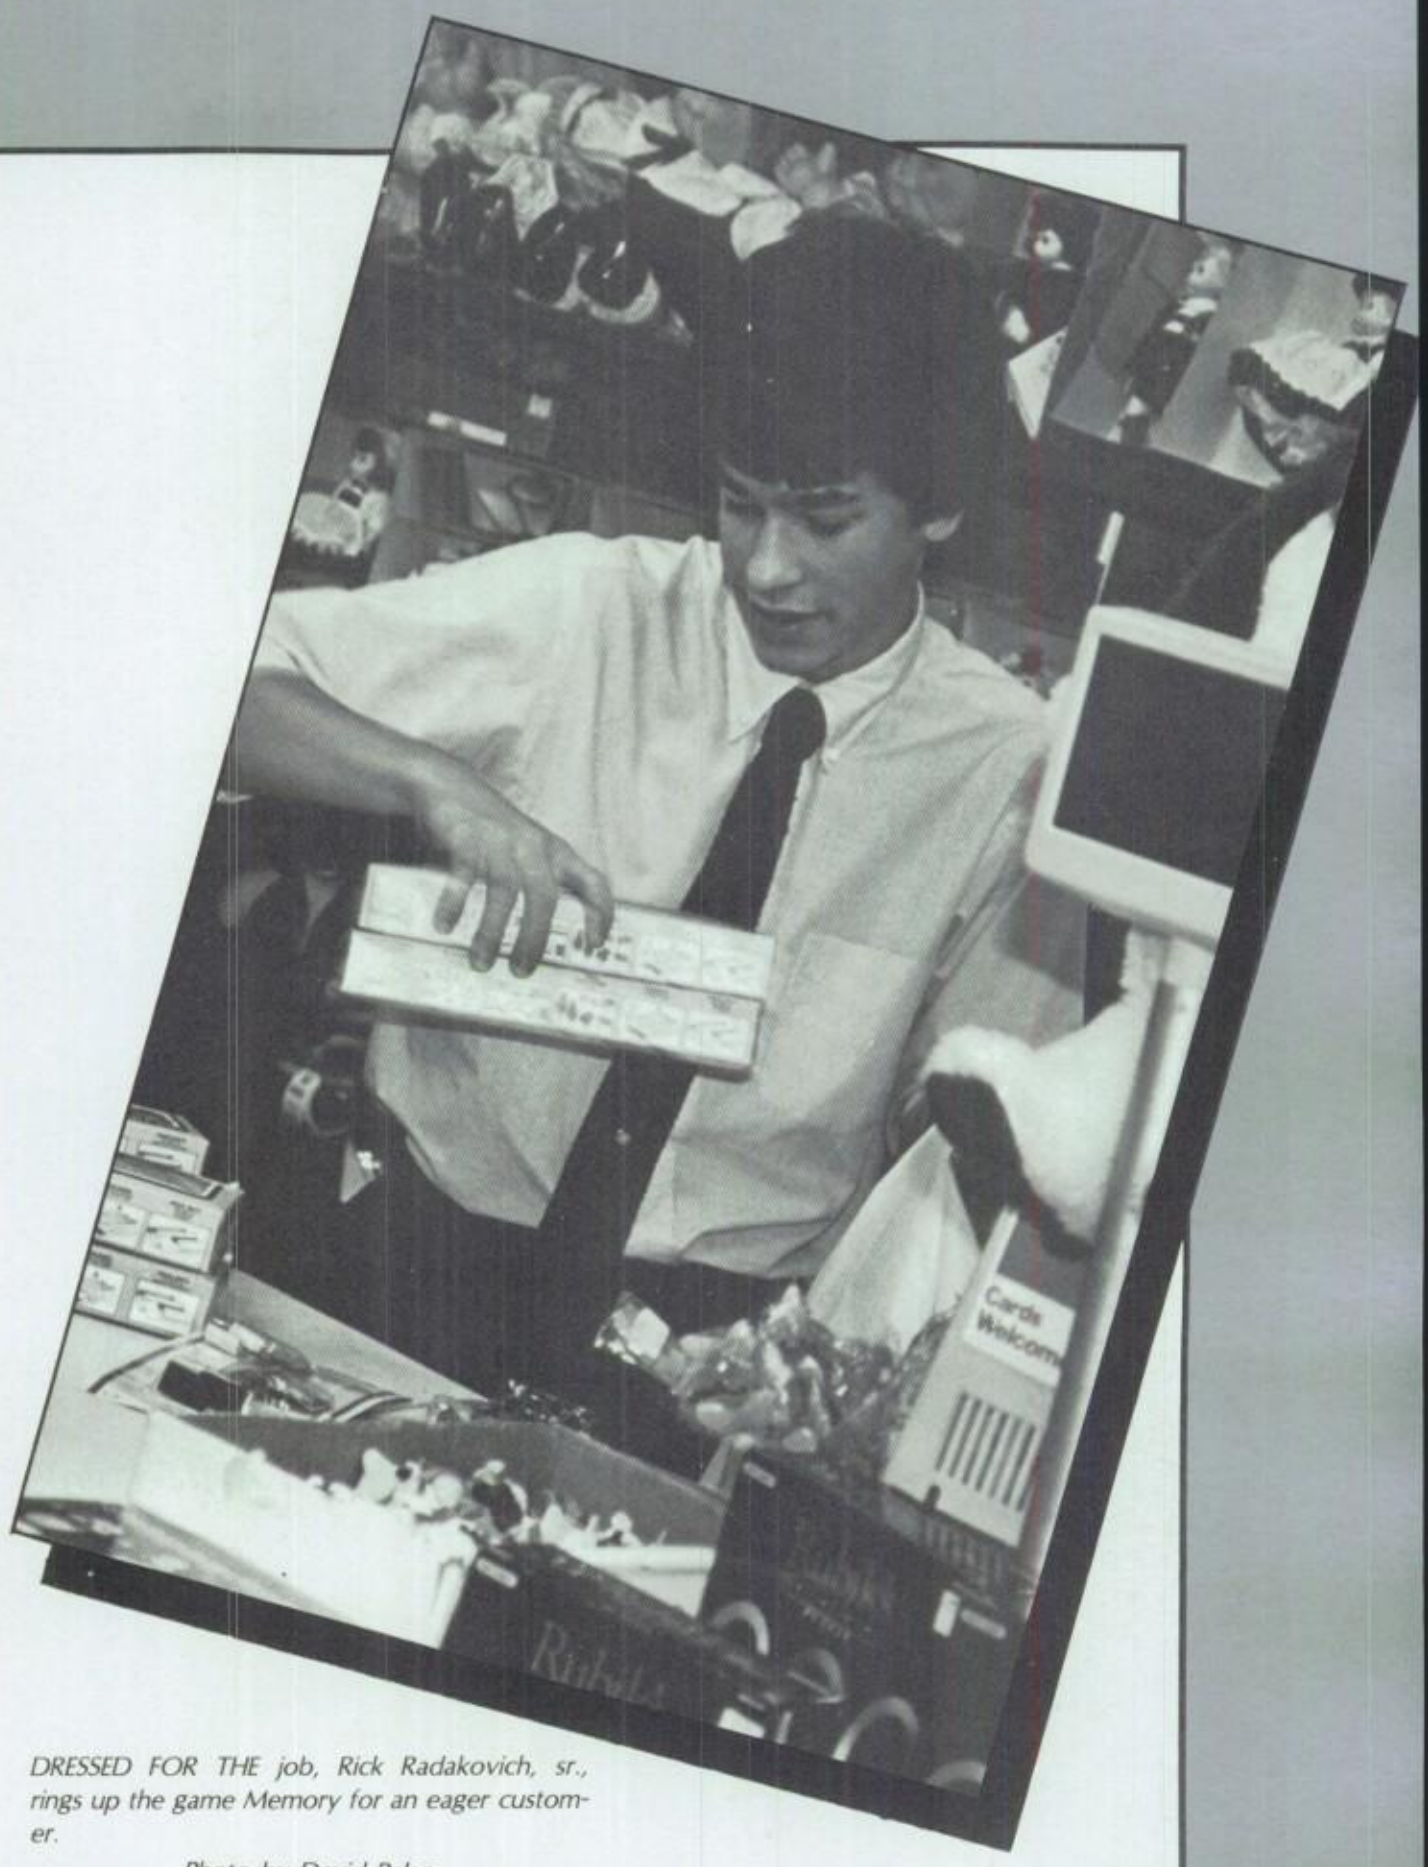
"It was amazing how the doctors performed so many immediate operations to save the babies' lives," said Greenfield.

While aspiring to be an architect, Mindy Spector, sr., was a member of a survey crew at an architecture/drafting firm. For the first time, Spector was exposed to the professional world.

"I became much more responsible after working there. I had to act like an adult because I was constantly surrounded by professionals," said Spector.

While teaching English as a second language to elementary school children, Dayna Hannon, sr., pursued her dream to teach. "In order for the kids to understand English, we'd often teach them silly songs. They were all very smart," said Hannon.

Whether singing songs, taking elevations, or assisting in medical emergencies, ambitious students were able to catalyze their career goals.



DRESSED FOR THE job, Rick Radakovich, sr., rings up the game Memory for an eager customer.

Senioritis Spreads

-Suzanne Miller

Senioritis /se nyor i' tis/ n: an extremely contagious disease, particularly affecting seniors in their last semester of high school.

Symptoms: short attention span, lack of interest in classes, failure to complete, (and sometimes start) homework, laziness, irresponsibility, carelessness, and general bummed-outed-ness.

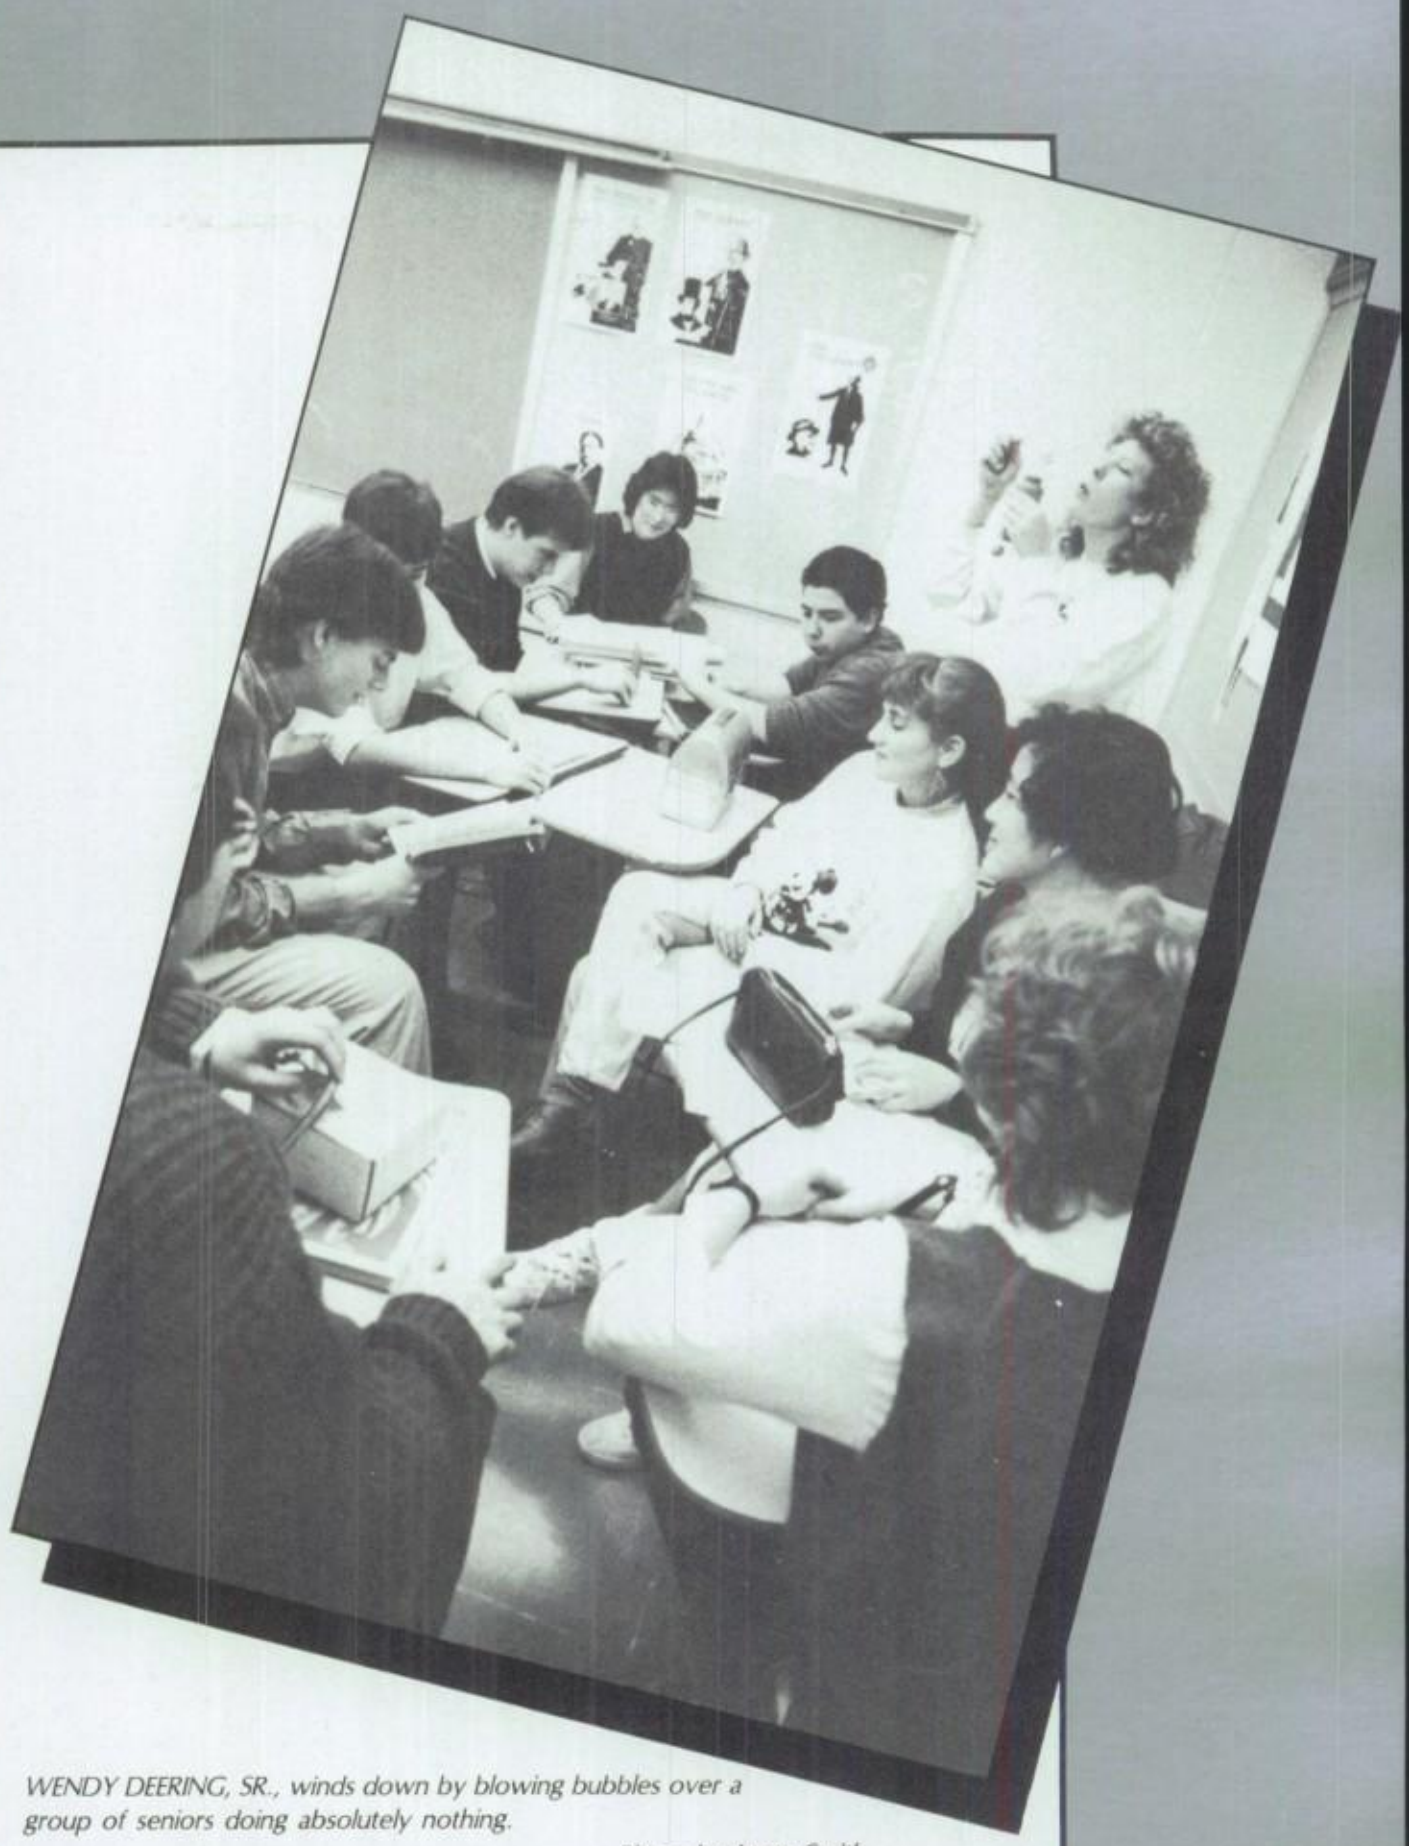
Causes: relief at having made it thus far through their high school careers, recognition of the futility of classes and grades except to facilitate graduation, acceptance to the college of one's choice, failure to see the remainder of high school as pertinent to one's future.

Effects: easy course schedule, lower grades, more parties, less sleep.

Cures: group therapy, preferably on the weekends.

Lisa Overholser, sr., described how Senioritis had affected her: "I haven't accomplished as much as I should've, but it just doesn't matter." Mr. Ruggles' AP American Government classes especially seemed to reflect this same attitude.

SURGEON GENERAL'S WARNING: While Senioritis may appear to be harmful, failure to contract the disease may result in extreme pressure, over-anxiety, frustration, and extreme depression.



WENDY DEERING, SR., winds down by blowing bubbles over a group of seniors doing absolutely nothing.

Musicians Band Together

-Shawna Rosen

Student bands offered talented musicians the experience of playing for the public and managing equipment and finances.

The members of New Frontiers: Pete Siegel, Jerry Kenefake, Eric Choucroun, Gary Culliss, jrs., and Bo Williams, soph., practiced three times a week and played at private parties and the Uptown theater.

Siegel, who played keyboards, reformed the band earlier this year after it had broken up over the summer. New to the band this year were Culliss on drums, and Choucroun, who had played guitar in the bands After Dark and Deceiver.

All the band members played because they enjoyed it, but they also hoped for a future in music.

"It's kind of like a part-time job right now, but I would like to see it become a career," said Williams, who started playing bass before junior high.

"If we're consistent with practicing and performing, I think the band could have a future," said Kenefake, lead singer. "I would like to have a career in the musical field, but realistically I can't tell at this time what the future holds for me or the band," said Siegel.

Let the Game begin

—Jennifer Stein

Imagine a cool, semi-dark room with enemies and teammates all around. The only objective is to earn points for your team and to stay out of the enemy's shooting range. Peeking around a corner, you aim carefully at the headband of your enemy. Flashing lights tell you your aim was perfect. Checking the source pack on your waist you tally how many points you have scored and how many times you have been shot. Quietly, you race back and forth between large rocks and the base while dodging shots from the enemy team. Adam Stein, fr., said "Tracer is a way to escape reality. The action really keeps you on your toes." Suddenly, the laser gun will not work and you realize that it means that you have been shot. But after waiting no longer than five seconds, you are back in the game. Quickly, you glance upwards. On the observation level you behold people watching the actions below.

In the midst of your enjoyment, a buzzer sounds telling you that the seven minutes are up. As you leave the room everyone stops to check for the winner, which is displayed on the scoreboard. Walking outside, you break away from your friends to look back at the motto on the new building at 105th and Metcalf—"Tracer—the game that you live."

Min pledges Allegiance to U. S.

-Rachel Rubin

"Oh say, can you see . . . " Paul Min has become a U.S. citizen . . .

"I'll be Korean for the rest of my life. When I look in the mirror, I see a Korean. My family eats Korean food, and you know, you are what you eat, so I guess I'm still Korean," said Paul Min, sr.

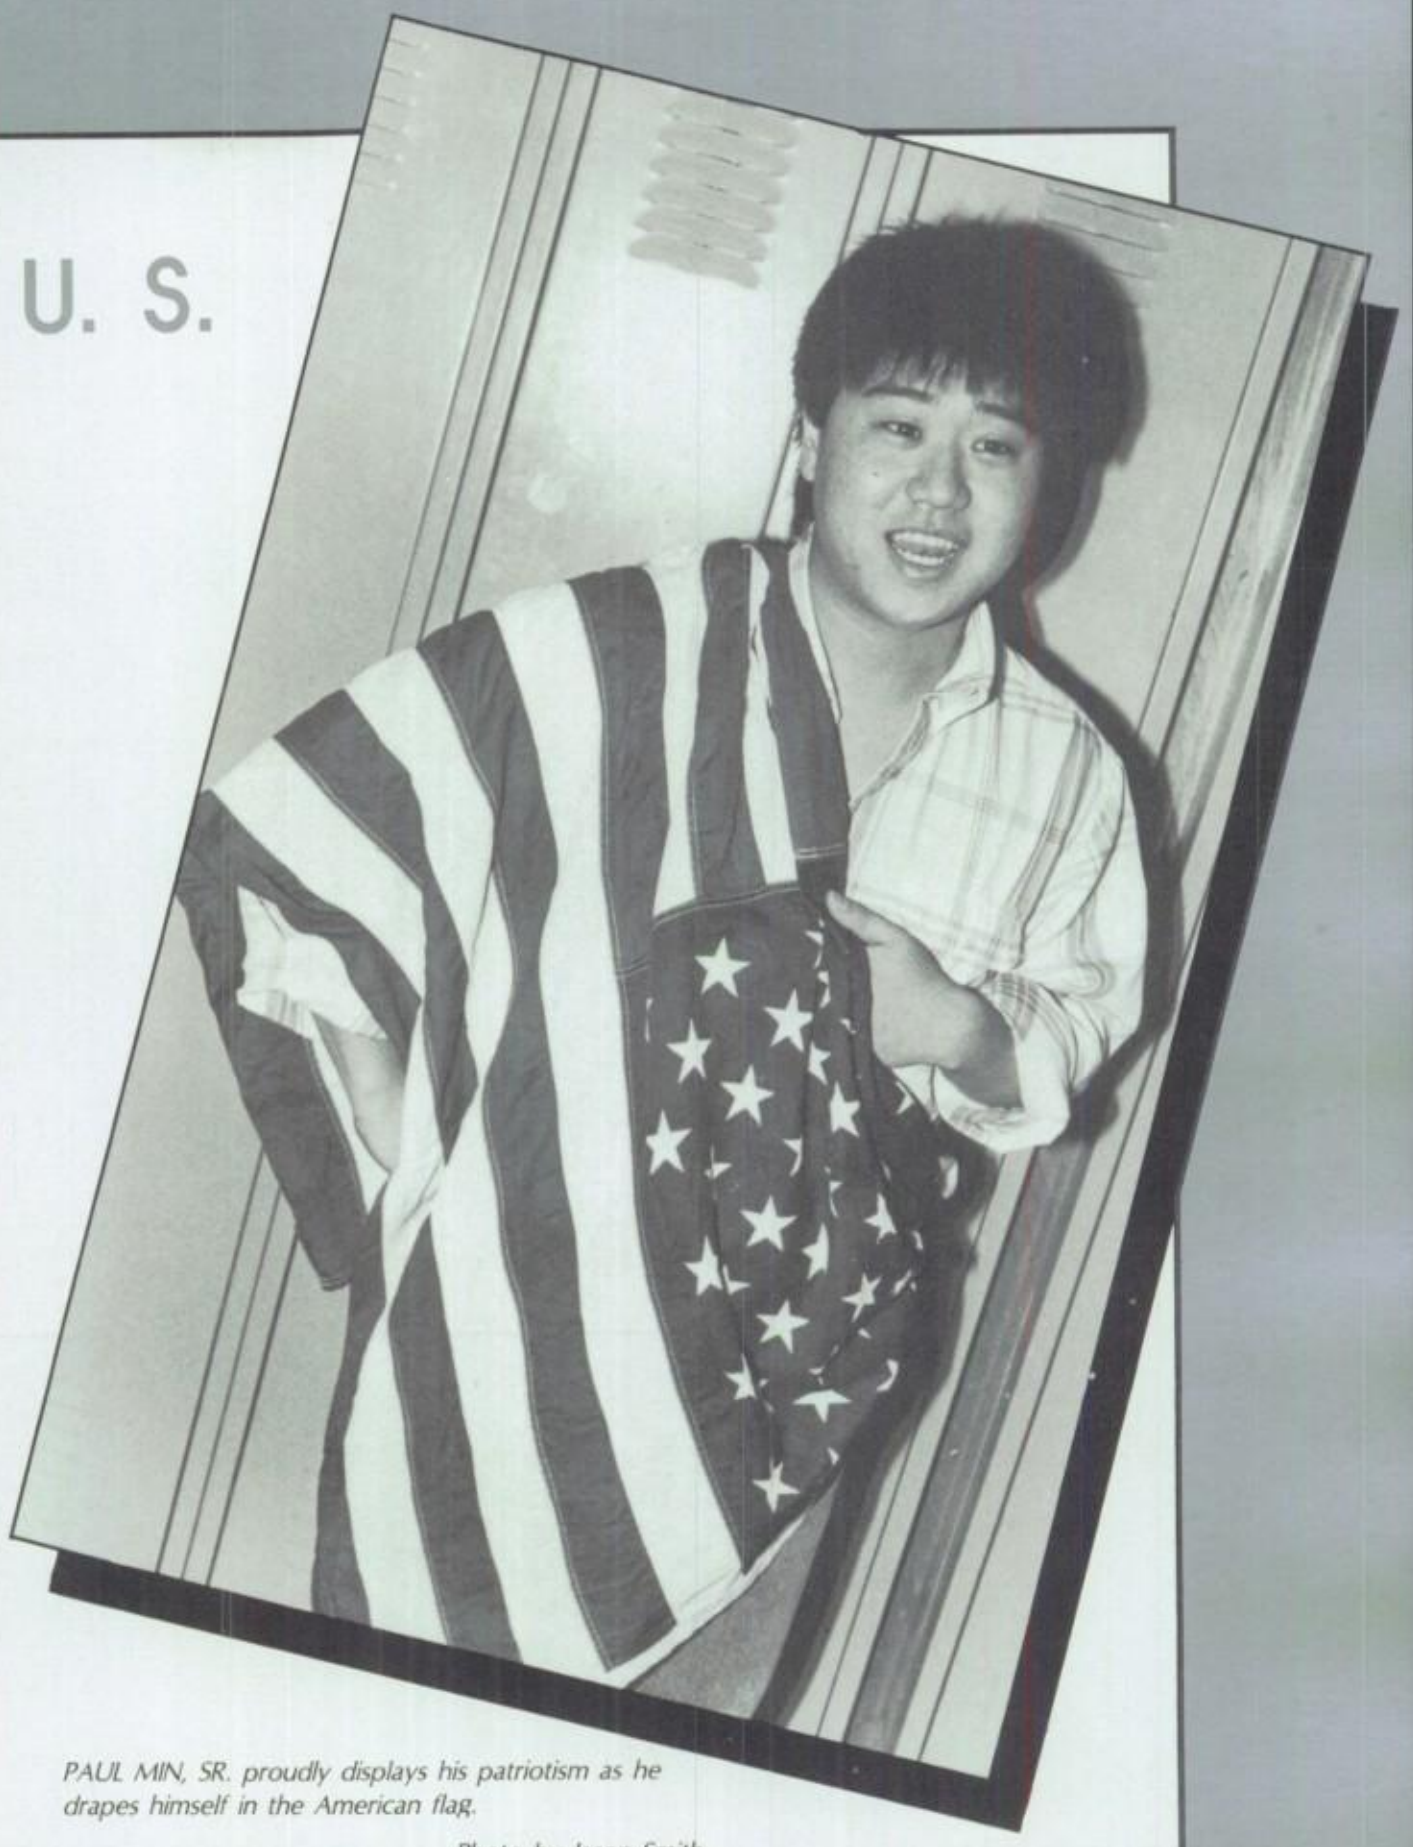
So what could possibly prompt Min to undergo the tedious naturalization process? "Basically, in order to qualify for the National Merit Scholarship, I had to become a U.S. citizen. That definitely was my overriding incentive," said Min.

After filling out an application and sending in dozens of pictures, an interview was arranged. "They asked all kinds of questions such as 'Who was the first President of the United States?' and 'Who freed the slaves?' When they asked where the capital of Kansas was, I said the first thing that popped into my head—KANSAS CITY! It was insane," exclaimed Min.

He then received a court date where he swore to abide by the constitution and the law.

"What so proudly he hailed . . . Whose broad stripes and bright stars. . ." Then, finally, Min received his own American flag—the highlight of the day.

"The only real privilege is gaining the right to vote. Aliens pay the same taxes and are required to register for the selective service. Being an American is just a state of mind," said Min.



PAUL MIN, SR. proudly displays his patriotism as he drapes himself in the American flag.

Don't Laugh It Could Be You

—Carol Kim

It was a cold, dreary day, and the parking lot was covered with ice. The only good part was that school was over. Eager to leave, you jumped into your car and were backing out when you realized that the car wasn't moving. All the gauges were working properly, and you could not seem to find the problem. You tried to reverse again and again, but nothing happened. Luckily several football players offered their much famed strength and pushed the car out. Clear from the ice at last! But wait, the car wouldn't go forward now. The players stared in disbelief. What could possibly prevent the car from moving? Ah, try the parking brake.

Empty halls warned you that class would begin soon. As you dashed to class, you quickly descended the stairs, but there seemed to be an extra step this time which disrupted the rhythm of your feet, causing you to tumble the rest of the way. Every single paper in your Gobot folder covered the floor, and you lay sprawled on the ground unable to get up partially because of the pain but also because of the embarrassment. The hardest part was explaining to the teacher why you were late.

Most students have periodically experienced an embarassing moment at South like tripping in the halls or going to the wrong class. "It is embarrassing when you say it and spray it," said Cindy Lewis, sr. So if you thought that you were the only one who walked into the wrong restroom or dressed as a nerd on Hawaiian day, think again.

A BEWILDERED STUDENT stares at the variety of textures, shapes, sizes, and colors strewn across the floor.

Turkey Bowl Upholds Tradition

—Rachel Rubin

Why were the cheerleaders dressed up in their skimpy junior high uniforms? Why were the football players covered with war paint? Why was there a splattering of orange, green, and blue all over the school? Was it Halloween? Of course not. It was the annual Turkey Bowl held November 22.

The Turkey Bowl gave senior guys the chance to reform their 9th grade Nallwood and Indian Creek football teams and challenge each other in a heated game of football. Many participants had not played for the South football team.

For the first time in several years, Nallwood upset Indian Creek by a score of 21–6. Nallwood persevered by planning strategies, as opposed to Indian Creek who just played for fun. "Nallwood was much more organized. We only practiced for about 20 minutes," said Terry Cunnyngham, sr.

Indian Creek egged Nallwood during practice, adding to the natural rivalry between the teams.

The festivities allowed seniors to reflect on the past. Some left school after lunch and talked about old times.

Supportive fans filled the bleachers to watch the event.

Cunnyngham summed up his feelings about the game, "The Turkey Bowl remains a tradition because we all want to hold on to our past."

Close your eyes and try to imagine some of the queer, bizarre things that are on the remotest extremes of possibility. Now seriously, what if . . .

Mrs. Daniels let down her bun.

All of the thrashers went bald.

Don Johnson won a Grammy.

Pat Warren became President of the United States of America.

Mr. Forbes found all of the papers he has never returned.

The Drill Team performed on Solid Gold.

E didn't equal mc^2.

Everyone wore fuscha on the Ides of March.

Rent-a-Pig got caught.

Marcy Caravelli stopped wearing reindeer on her sweaters.

All of the ski lodges were hit by tornadoes during Spring Break.

Bruce Springsteen sang opera.

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern were still alive.

Everyone was colorblind, (what colors would traffic signals be?)

Dayna Hannon got attacked by a rabbit.

The dictionary wasn't in alphabetical order.

Math teachers stopped wearing their green and gold department shirts on Fridays.

Mr. Dawson played professional football.

The Huxtables waged war on the Keatons.

K-Mart stopped having blue-light specials.

Excuses, Excuses Excuses . . .

—Carol Kim and Suzanne Miller

Sorry, I'm late, but . . .
I had to milk the cows.
I had to practice "Chopsticks" for a music scholarship.
Mr. Murray was blocking the front hall.
I had to sharpen my crayons.
KSMS told me to stay tuned.
I felt a novel coming on.
I was chasing my slinky down the stairs.
My pet fish was in labor.
I was attending the opening of my canned beets.
I was searching for a parking space.
I couldn't find a purse to match my car.
The principal said he might drop by.
I accidentally ran over Fred Lynch.
I was photocopying my face so I could remember what I look like.
I was trying to find myself.
I changed my locker combination and I couldn't get out.
The Phil Van Eyck Fan Club was meeting.
I had to study for a pop quiz.
I didn't know you were here.
I was building a Ferrari from a kit.
Dick Dawson was teaching his ferret to yodel.
I never go out in months that have an "R".
I was forming impressions of the "Impressions" column.
I was in the cafeteria watching the buns rise.
Hey, wait! I'm not late. You're early.
Yeah, yeah, that's it! That's the ticket!

"I Ride A Hot Potatoe . . ."

-Rachel Rubin

Talking Heads fans were euphoric to find their favorite rock group plastered on the covers of both Time and Rolling Stone magazines.

Not only did the group receive press coverage for their latest album True Stories, but also for lead singer David Byrne's acting/directing debut in the movie True Stories. "I liked the album much more after I saw the movie—it's typically Talking Heads," said Hubert Liu, sr.

The new LP gained instant approval among veteran Heads fans, but the hit single and video Wild, Wild Life generated a wider Heads' following. "Most people who saw the movie already liked the Heads," said Liu.

But with recent publicity, the band's problems have been exposed. According to the Rolling Stone interview, Byrne's popularity has caused a rift in the band's cohesiveness. Members Tina Weymouth, Chris Frantz, and Jerry Harrison are itching to go on tour, but Byrne is engaged in individual endeavors. And being capped as "Rock's Renaissance Man" by Time and compared to David Bowie by critics hasn't improved band relations any. "I think Byrne is wimping out. He has stage fright, and he still wants to make more movies. The Heads need the energy of a live show or else they'll lose their following," said Kevin Karpin, sr.

Although True Stories did not open in Kansas City, a group of loyal Heads fans journeyed to Lawrence to preview the flick. "It was disappointing that the movie only played in selected cities," said Karpin.

Students Debate Issues

—Shawna Rosen

As one walked by room 153 after school, the sounds of raised voices could be heard through the door. When the door was opened, general chaos was in progress. It was obvious what was taking place . . . an Issues '87 meeting.

Issues '87 was a simulation of the process of creating the U.S. Constitution. Student delegates from schools in the Kansas City area made up 53 delegations. Each delegation was divided into pro and con teams, which were made up of five members each.

The five team positions were Bill of Rights, Legislative, Executive, Judicial, and Processes. Each member learned about different parts of the Constitution, and then conferred with the other team members. The Pro and Con met at an Article Drafting Session where proposals were discussed and voted upon. On May 1st, all 53 delegations met at JUCO for the Constitutional Convention where they spent the entire day preparing the final draft.

"Issues gives you a chance to experience first-hand how the processes of government function," said David Palan, jr. "I like talking about current issues, and it makes me feel important trying to learn more about the government and my country," said Debbie Glazer, jr.

Lifestyles of the Lazy Veterans

—Carol Kim

With years' experience, seniors carefully planned for a most memorable year, setting a relaxed pace at the start of school. In short, they knew what to expect and knew all the strings to pull.

After three years of rules and regulations, seniors had gained respect from not only their peers, but also the faculty. There appeared to be a certain glow to this prestigious title, and one could easily detect a senior by the lackadaisical stroll in the halls, the stress lines from past years, and the alertness of May 20 approaching. Even the awe of being a senior affected the underclassmen. "You're assumed to be smarter and more mature," said Robin Kempf, sr.

These few and privileged students had many opportunities to relax and be carefree. Open lunch, consortium, and semester graduation were main choices offered to seniors. "It's a blow off," said Laura Lectenberg, sr., and Mike Greenfield, sr., said "I really don't have to worry about making the grade now."

Others, however, felt that their last year was tough. "You have more responsibilities and make more decisions. The hardest part is budgeting your time," said Shanna Foster, sr.

Rachel Rubin, sr., expressed her view, "If you make it through your junior year, you can make it through anything."

That's What Friends are for

—Rachel Rubin

As a friendship ages, it can go inone of two directions. One, it can age just like fine wine, improving in quality with each passing year. Or else, it can sour just like tainted wine and turn to vinegar. Friendships that survived the test of time were especially unique. Old buddies knew how to maintain open, healthy relationships.

Whereas change shattered the unsteady bonds of weak friendships, change only strengthened the ties of sturdy ones. "The relationship has had to change with our personalities. Our friendship has really been put to the test, but we've worked at keeping it together because we think it's worth the effort," said Nicole Buchanan, sr.

Chasing out the doldrums took extra effort from both sides. Spontaneity rejuvinated the vitality of new friendships. "We do fun and spontaneous things like going jogging or having lunch in the park," said Stacy Bomgaars, sr.

Troubled times often brought people even closer, forming a unique union. "We've gone through good and bad times together and experienced many of the same things. For instance, we both live with single parents and have had our boyfriends go off to college," said Andrea Scott, sr.

Almost everyone has had a special best friend at one time or another. If the friendships were carefully nurtured, they lasted forever, improving with every passing year.

Are we really Prepared?

-Rachel Rubin

In the ninth century France created the educational system in order to preserve customs and properly breed youth.

Since then, there have been tendencies to develop both analytical and practical skills.

But is our system working? Were we really prepared to tackle the obstacles we are bound to encounter in the 'real' world? Did South teach us more than how to solve for x?

Often times the few classes that taught how to balance a checkbook or how to change a flat tire were only available to selected people. We were prevented from taking these classes because of schedule conflicts.

"If you want to go to a selective college, you have to take an academic course load. There isn't time to learn about balancing a checkbook," said Chris Schwimmer, sr.

Perhaps we were expected to learn on our own. "There's only so much you can learn in a classroom," said Lisa Overholser, sr.

Whether students opted to learn analytical skills, solving for x and preparing for further education; or sought practical skills; balancing a checkbook and preparing for 'real life, South offered enough variety in classes for students to further their ambitions.

BREAKING OUT OF the eggs of youth, graduates leave the protective nest of South to fly in the real world.

Authority Figures

—Mary Beth Burwinkle

Each day was greeted with a new challenge for the administrators. Trying to make sure that each student followed rules and were disciplined properly was a never ending job. But discipline was not the only concern for the administrators. They dealt with attendance, the advisory board, the PTC, and the master schedule, to name a few.

The arrival of freshmen did not have much of an effect on the administrators. Disciplinary methods remained the same except for a new program commonly known as "The Breakfast Club." Saturday detentions proved to be successful as students disliked spending an entire Saturday in the school library. Other disciplinary programs were detentions, which were simply taken after school, and inhouse suspension.

Each of the administrators worked hard to keep students out of trouble. Dr. Charles Nichols, principal, explained how he handled discipline, "We try to use good judgement to determine what is best for the situation."

Guided by Counselors

—Mary Beth Burwinkle

Future plans such as careers and colleges were of the utmost importance to many graduating seniors. Counselors provided a lot of sound advice and background information to those students who eagerly awaited such guidance. Counselors also aided students with other problems and decisions, such as choosing the right courses to suit their own personal likes and dislikes.

The counselors devised programs to help students in their career planning. Freshmen were required to enroll in Advisory Period. This course was constructed to provide students with a reliable foundation on which they could build a solid future.

Because of the addition of the freshmen class, two new counselors, Mr. Don Carrington and Mr. Harry Gardner, came to South. Commenting on how the freshmen dealt with the new change, Mr. Gardner said, "After talking to the parents of several ninth grade students, I have found that overall they have adjusted quite well." Mr. Gardner also said that South met all of his expectations and he enjoyed his first year.

Mrs. Zela Holt, a counselor at South since 1966, summed up her feelings about the freshmen by saying, "Counselors deal with the student rather than the grade level, therefore the arrival of freshmen has not made a big difference in the counseling program."

The secretaries handled day to day business such as answering telephones, writing and typing letters for the administrators, and handling attendance and scheduling appointments. They accomplished these tasks with efficiency and a warm friendly attitude.

Together this hard working staff provided the students with essential services. They helped the year run smoothly with their strong commitment and dedication.

Library Invaded

-Karyn Poznick

South experienced the addition of many new students and teachers due to the reorganization plan. A new beginning for our library was one of those dreams which came with the wave of freshmen. In addition to Mrs. Marjorie Lane, South's library staff included Mrs. Karen Davis, formerly at Indian Creek. The two librarians were always ready and waiting to help any student in need of assistance.

In addition to the new face in the library, there was a new computer. This special computer is called a Harris. "It allows us to tap or search the District's Database system. The system records every book owned in the school district including quantity and location," said Mrs. Davis. The installation of the computer has allowed South to lend and borrow books more efficiently than in previous years.

The Harris computer joined an Apple IIE already being used. All overdue notices were handled by the Apple. This gave the librarians more time to help students and make classroom presentations. Book talks and introduction to the library lessons were a product of such extra time. The library hoped to continue its advancement in computers by some day handling all aspects involved in circulation.

Mr. Forbes' AP US History class was fortunate to be the first ones to try out another new computer system of South's. Datasearch helped students with providing lists of sources pertaining to relevent topics for their research papers.

Another valuable part of the school was the production center run by Mr. Earl Fleer. It was in room 180 where all papers for teachers were copied and AV equipment stored. He also helped with the radio and television stations by repairing and ordering necessary equipment.

SARA LECHTENBERG, JR., places a book to be copied in place.

Much labor Benefits all

-Jana Tannenbaum

Lunches were ready and served on time. Hallways were cleaned, the grounds kept groomed, and activities set up. Both the custodian and cafeteria staffs worked long, hard hours for these events to occur perfectly. The cafeteria workers began their day by serving breakfast to students. This was the first year of serving breakfast which students gratefully appreciated when there was no time for breakfast at home. Next for the workers, came the preparation of lunch and snacks were served to juniors and seniors during their study halls. The custodian staff was also busy with their routine maintenance and emergencies which arose. The custodians had a new obstacle to tackle with the installation of an alarm system. The alarm was a guard against burglars and any senior pranks.

All of the workers' duties were aimed to benefit the students and faculty. Although many of the tasks accomplished by the custodians and cafeteria workers went by unnoticed, without their help the school would have come to a standstill.

AN EMPLOYEE OF A.B. May, installs the new alarm system.

PTC works For students

-Jana Tannenbaum

The Parent Teacher Club enjoyed working to provide many worthwhile services for parents, students, and faculty. The PTC consisted of 16 couples who welcomed the opportunity to be involved in their children's high school years. The officers of the club were Lynn and Ben Sparks, presidents; Gail and Bill Harris, vice presidents; Hazel and Stu Knutson, secretaries; Sharon and Gary Ihde, treasurers; who all presided over the monthly meetings. The meetings consisted of a committee, an administration, and a faculty report. The PTC's committees sponsored many events throughout the school year. They served refreshments at the school parties and teacher luncheons, helped with Back-to-School nights and the Raider Rally, and one of their greatest efforts was to ensure the help of Mr. Kevin Beauford, and alcohol and drug counselor. The PTC sponsored alcohol awareness meetings which both parents and students attended. The parents' dedication and hard work was well rewarded by the successful activities.

Driven to a life of hunting

—Jana Tannenbaum

Although many are led to believe teachers have no existence outside of school hours, hidden talents and hobbies are revealed when students look past graded papers and preparation for tests. In Mr. Charles Ruggle's case, many hobbies were exposed in classroom discussions while other hobbies are not so well known.

One interest well known to all, was Ruggle's obsession with SAABs. The saga began in 1978 with Ruggle's first SAAB turbo. Ruggle's involvement with SAABs was sustained by the car's handiness along with their safety features. Because Ruggles believes, "SAABs have very good acceleration," his two present cars were equipped with radar detectors. But, as a surprise to all, he went against past beliefs and bought a BMW. This switch was prompted by the BMW being a six cylinder and a better trade-in-value.

Besides Ruggles fascination with cars, he was also an avid gunsman. Belonging to the 710 Gun Club, he shot twice a week in good weather conditions and once a week in the winter months. Each time he went to the club, he shot about 400 rounds. The goal in his shooting was to try to get as many shots in as small an area as possible. Relief of tension was one reason for Ruggle's hobby as a gunsman. Ruggles suggested that while shooting at the target, "I imagine my worst student."

Not only did Ruggles express his sportsmanship in shooting but also in the fashion of his dress. The preppy look with a bit of outdoors is Ruggle's style. Subscribing to L.L. Bean (a magazine catering to the sportsmen) enabled him to order merchandise often. His association with the catalog began as a child and has grown throughout the years. Because his wardrobe relied on the catalog, "The L.L. Bean telephone number is programmed into my self-dialing telephone."

Inside the classroom, only a part of a teacher was exposed, but with a closer examination, intriguing details were revealed about our educators.

MR. CHARLES RUGGLES, Government teacher, happily models his SAAB.

A Humorous Approach

—Mary Beth Burwinkle

Dedicated is a word often associated with Mr. Mike Naster. Besides teaching American Government and Intro. to Social Studies, Naster is also the head coach for the Cross Country Team and Boys' and Girls' Track.

When students walk into Naster's classroom the atmosphere is a relaxed one and he makes it clear from the first day that students can ask him questions anytime about anything.

A typical day in class usually begins with current events. Naster then will either lecture or show films or video tapes that will inform students on the subject. Students find themselves looking forward to the class rather than dreading it because Naster lightens up the atmosphere with his witty humor.

Naster spends what little free time he has with his new dog Woody and his nieces and nephews.

Naster explains his feelings about teaching by saying, "When I'm in the classroom, I feel I can really be myself and I'm happiest there. I love kids and I love teaching them!"

MRS. JUNE SCORZA, secretary, puts a caller on hold.

An Era Comes To An End

—by Karyn Poznick

"Shawnee Mission South," said Mrs. June Scorza each time she answered the phone in the office for the last twenty-one years. Mrs. Scorza has been at South since the year it opened, thus, she has been the only one to use South's switchboard.

Answering the telephone and taking messages was just one of her responsibilities. Each day involved a different list of jobs ranging from selling parking permits to getting assignments for homebound students. One day, nineteen substitutes were checked in by Mrs. Scorza.

"I love my job. I've really enjoyed watching South grow over the years and all the people passing through," commented Mrs. Scorza, who retired at the end of the school year. She worked twenty-six years in the Shawnee Mission District. After working at the Administration Building for five years, she was transferred to South.

Life after South will not be slow and dull for Mrs. Scorza. She has made great plans for her new spare time. Oil painting and traveling will be the lucky occupants of her time. Chicago, Devils Lake, and Texas were at the top of her list of places to visit because of her many relatives that reside in those cities.

The adjustment of Mrs. Scorza's leaving was felt by both faculty members, the administration, and students. It was yet another change experienced by South. But one would always have the memories of Mrs. Scorza's "Shawnee Mission South."

The highlight was being part of the state soccer team. That was the high pt. of sr. yr. After the season, joined indoor team: "TREE". I was unsure of transferring, but now have new frnds, like DANO,STERLING,DEE,CHRIS; as well as others. The adjustment was easy.

School is a giant playground. Use it to your advantage. I basically feel that I haven't learned anything except tolerance and responsibility. This was my first year here and I met a lot of people. I wish you crazy headbangers alot of luck. We'll all need it. Alice is God. Later on. Finally life begins.

A Spectrum of Support

Ads. Students love them, businesses want them, the yearbook needs them. Each year ad space is sold to help raise funds to help cover the costs of all those "little extras" which make each yearbook unique.

Although the popularity of ads has constantly grown, many students and businesses chose to purchase their ads during second or third quarter, well after the initial deadline.

However, this section had been shortened by 14 pages to make room for the freshmen portraits. As a result, the demand was great and space had been purchased faster than ever, leaving many would-be advertisers out of luck. The editors quickly arranged to have 16 pages added to the book, all of which would go for more advertising space.

Once, again, within days, the majority of the space had been filled. This desire to help and be a part of the yearbook was indicative of the spectrum of support which was prevalent in making this year one of great success.

THE KEY TO capturing the memories of 1987.

BAND LUNCH TABLE

"You know what we're saying, dahling!"

Geeb-time! We're SENIORS!!BCP – You're the Best Friend a person could ever have. Wanna play some B-ball? Do ya have any honey-roast peanuts? You can be – - "pretty checky." MAH-BEEP! Penny loafer don't you walk on by. FEL – Do you think we'll ever be sister-in-laws? HALRR – We've had our disagreements, sorry, Let's remember the good times – Brown paper bags!! Oh my, look at the time, it's time to go. It's a slow mow day today. Well, dudies – "Friends are friends forever if the Lord's the lord of them and a friend will not say never, cuz the welcome will not end. "Love, your #1 Geeber – Mary Hey, guys! We made it! Believe me, I had my doubts. Band – the most fun, most rewarding, most frustrating, most joyous, most heartrending, most loving time of my life. Glad you were there. Senior leadership was fantastic!! Lake – peace & friendship. Remember parties, talks, New Year's Eve, skiing, geebin' out, Duran2, and all our many lost and found loves. "Don't rush me, I'm buying jeans." You all are the best! I hope you get everything you want in life, you deserve it! Always remember I'm here for you. The guys (and we've had our fair share) will come and go, but we'll always have each other. Be happy! I love you! "What the heart has once owned and had, it shall never lose." – MARIA To a terrific bunch of friends – the years have had their ups and downs, but yet we've managed to make it through them. "Friends are Friends Forever." Maria/"Checky, huh?", Hawaii Five-O, Double D's, "Don't get run over." N.R. Laura/Peppermint patties, Pumpernut, Docks, "Sybil, hold your water" Mary/Infatuations – phases, underwear – outside (yard), Return and sis Send, Amazon tans, band-time late. Thanks for everything. I am always here for you. May our memories and friendships last forever. – BETH To the best friends, we made it, – I always knew we would. BCP – Peppermint patties, lake trips, & water pollution. You are the best. Siamese twin- 10%, toilet monsters, pizzas, and bus rides. MEM – Brown paper bags, slow mow days, & "Time" (Let's remember the good.) We all have so many memories – may they stay in our hearts 4ever. We are friends 4 ever and "If you ever need a friend, just call upon my name." I love you all and wish you the best of luck in whatever you do. Love always, LAURA.

And if I were to say
To you upon this day,
"I am near,"
Would you hear?
I believe so.

And if you were so bold
As to take my hand to hold
For all time,
Would you be mine?
I believe so.

But if time alone can build
Or destroy all which is willed
Within mortal domain,
Shall we remain?
I truly believe so.

It's been such a long time
I think I should be goin
Time doesn't wait for me
It keeps on rollin'
So long, on a distant highway
We've got to keep on chasin' our dreams
I got to do it my way
Well, I'm takin' my time
I'm just movin' along
You'll forget about me after I've been gone
And I take what I find
I don't want no more
It's just outside of your front door
It's been such a long time
Well, I get so lonely
When I am without you
But in my mind, deep in my mind
I can't forget about you
Good times, places that remind me
I'm tryin' to forget your name
And leave it all behind me
You're comin' back to find me
There's a long road
I gotta stay in time with
I've got to keep on chasin' that dream
Though I may never find it

Twenty-two people with different minds
Working in different ways
Different worlds going different places
But not for those three days.
What was it that brought us back together
To set our lives aside
And search the corners for definite answers
That were there for friends to find.
Nobody had to be careful
Nobody had to go home
For those few days we were all together
No one was alone. C. Whitworth woman of God. I love you.

It's only been 4 years into our friendship but is seems like a lifetime. We've held each other accountable and stuck by each other. You have taught me so much about myself and who/what I am living for. You truly are my best (bebopin) friend Wendy! Your acceptance and friendship gave me strength through a lot of hard times. Too many jokes are going to keep me smiling for a lifetime – Which is never too long to live as friends . . . "MIN ON THE HALF-SHELL"
LOOK, BOTTICELLI — I HAVEN'T GOT ALL DAY; FINISH THE PAINTING SO I CAN GO TO SCHOOL AND TAKE THE LOCKER PICTURE... ...KENNON CAN'T FLOAT FOREVER, YOU KNOW!

Guy Forsyth—Oh no! You're not going to fall for that, "I wouldn't lie to you. I'm your government!" line, again?!? If you want to stop war, you gotta sing Loud.

Lisa and Linda Overholser —"I'm Linda, she's Lisa." I'm Lisa, she's Linda."

Paul Min—How come everyting Mr. Heuer says sounds like a threat to beat you over the head with a large, blunt object? "Dait, Jim! I'm a doctor, not a French Tickler!" Brad—I want a WASP servant when I grow up.

Kelli Kalbac—Did you do your Assignment?! We Want Durant!! BIG BAD BOB!

Alisa Attardi—Thank you all for (VERB) my (NOUN). You've made me (PRED. ADJ.) and you've (VERB PAST TENSE) me through my (ADJ.) year. I'll (VERB) you always! If you ever have a (NOUN) . . .

Rachelle Berlin—To All: Live Laissez-faire!

Wendy Deering—T-Gating is where it's at. Also, maximum Wonder Bubble capacity is 14 mph, and JF—We want Durant back!

Brad Williamson—So what if I drop Calculus? It raised my I.Q. By the way, I have an announcement. I've been accepted at KU! (Applause) And then there's ————————. There is no God if He created that man/woman. Folks, thanks for being real people who are always there, even when you shouldn't be. I know I'll appreciate it many years from now, when you're all wealthy Republicans. Me? Well, the capitol of Nebraska is Lincoln. P.S. Bob Wenger and I have the same initials. Sheep before celibacy!

Kevin Karpin—Sleep deep with big, black sheep. The proof is in the pudding.

Jolie Bailey—One Vivarin equals two No-Doz. You're just a pseudo-intellectual. I'm not #1. Bill Olsen—I wish to thank the Academy, the Queen of England, and Igor Spankinoffski, but mostly I want to thank all of you. You showed me that not all the teaching in school is done by teachers. Now pardon me while I go vegitate in the corner.

Chris O'Brien—Hey Joel, sweet and sour sauce, sweet and sour mix—what's the difference? It's like gravy on the shillelagh. There you go.

Joel Kennon—Having a speed limit of 25 mph is not just another good idea, it's the law. Paul, the tape case is ready when you are. Pepperoni!!!

Mark Schaffer—When the going gets tough, the tough get an Uzi. It was 100% coffee . . . Trust me. Chew on a Yuppie, you capitalist dogs.

Hubert Liu—As we part our separate ways, always remember the almost-deaths you've experienced in my car. Beware of the killer curb. DA Unibody. Never forget the Folger's fiasco . . . "Relax, pink is your color."

Michelle Roberts—Then I saw these three metallic pink and green poodles walking through my back yard . . . Now that I have your attention, I'd like to say thanks for being real people. I'll never Forget you. And to all: May the force be with you.

Heather Wood—"He's dead, Jim.", "Lasciate ogni speranaz.", "I'm not used to not understanding things." Brian Kimble—Eleven times? I know it was only six! The capitol of Nebraska is Lincoln. Paul, the capitol of Kansas is . . .

Sarah Chittenden—Well guys—I'm still a lousy writer. Ask Mme. Turk—she'll tell ya. Therefore, I will spare you grammatical grief and conclude in several words of wisdom. "Pleasure is the only thing worth having a theory about" —Wilde Oh, and guys—"Never trust a woman who wears mauve." —Wilde P.S. Oscar Wilde is fantastic.

Becky Ellis—When I began writing this, I decided to thank all of my closest friends for their undying support, understanding, blah, blah, blah. Then, I realized that those of you who really care don't expect a thank you of any kind. You are my friends, and caring is just a part of the job. I wish the best for you always, whether you wind up at Stanford, Harvard, Yale, or JCCC, for you are truly unique, truly wonderful people—and you've given me some memories that time won't soon erase. Stay gold.

Stacy Hinthorn—Thank you all for making me secure in the knowledge that I am not the only crazy person here. And I'm NOT you know. So what if I'm a little giddy in the mornings. I hope that if you all ever have moments of uncertainty, confusion, or exasperation later in life that you'll stop, pause, think of me and realize that things cannot get worse. Au revoir y'all.

Shanna S. Foster—"Bad news on the doorstep, I couldn't take one more step." Thanks to you, the only thing I didn't lose was my sanity. Almost, but not quite. Croppers are a dangerous thing. Pray you or I never encounter one again. I still think you're all nerds, but I love you. Or is it lust? Thank you for occupying my house, our sofas never had better company. What does your daughter do? "Sid! What about the farewell drugs?!" —Nancy Spurgen '77

Mike Hurwitz—Just try not to flatuate audibly in front of the opposite sex. And remember: Yes, you can make your dog get down, but can you make it boogie?

YA LOOK GOOD!

Colophon

Volume 21 of the Heritage yearbook was printed by Inter-Collegiate Press, Mission, Kansas.

Cover idea by the editors and Mrs. Linda Barber. The cover is white lithograph cloth with school art in lithograph colors. Spine copy and year in silver hotstamp. "Heritage" artwork is varnished.

Headline type styles vary according to the sections: Opening, closing and division sections – Fritz Quadrata Light; Organizations section – Ballardvale Bold; Sports section – Optimist; Academics section – Time Roman Bold; Student Body section – Avante Garde; Body copy is Optimist.

The 1987 Heritage had a press run of 2200 copies.

The yearbook staff would like to thank Mr. Than Castle and Mr. John DeCloud of DeCloud Studios, Mrs. Nancy Collins of Inter-Collegiate Press, and NEFF Printing for providing the Fritz Quadrata Light headline type style.

A special thanks goes to Mr. Bob Gadd of Inter-Collegiate Press for his patience and support throughout the production of this yearbook.

1987 Heritage Editors

Editors and staff,

Now wasn't that fun? You guys were really great. If you felt that all of your hard work (or lack of) went unnoticed all year, well, you're probably right. But do not fret, because here it is—instant gratification with a cover. Shanna—What you might have lacked in organization was more than made up for in creativity. Remember, "Just fill out the bottoms and ask Mrs. Barber to look at it . . . " Thanks for keeping it interesting. Lisa—The writing and editing in your section was at least incredible if not always on time. Don't worry, someday you too will be able to make the pilgrimage to ICP. Jenny—I can't thank you enough for your help with the supplements. You truly give a new meaning to the word "commitment". Stacey—Besides being a great editor, you are a great friend. Thanks for helping me remember what was truly important whenever I seemed to forget. Rachel—I actually enjoyed checking your section. You did an incredible job handling all of those extra pages. I hope that someday you'll get your byline. Alisa—You and your little notebook did quite a job handling the, shall we say "Ad conflicts". Your hard work and massages were greatly appreciated. Scott—Howdy! Uh, let's wait for an elevator with lights. Your pics were fantastic, you really carried the load, thanks. And, do you think you could, uh, maybe sign my yearbook? Mrs. Barber—I was so relieved that you were still the advisor. Your ideas and support really made a difference. Thanks a whole big spectrum! Next year's Editors and staff—Try to take all of the hard work and headaches in stride. You are all in for a truly incredible experience. I wish you the best of luck with the 1988 Heritage. South—Well here it is, your 1987 Heritage. May it provide many years of good clean fun for the entire family.

Robert A. Wiest

Editor-in-Chief

Mrs. Barber—You're fantastic! I still don't understand how you can stay so calm in the midst of all this chaos. Thanks for all of your help and support. Editors—We've come a long way with this book. I never want to see another pyramid again. We used to have fun . . . what happened? Thanks for memories, you guys! Rob—Thanks for something! Seriously, I really appreciate the trust you put in me, and the flexibility you gave me with deadlines. You had the hardest job of any of us. I really admire you. Shanna— Some people march to the beat of a different drummer, some are just weird. I think you know what I mean. Thanks for being there and understanding when no one else did. Jenny & Lisa—Keep your special sparkle. I know you will both be successful in the future. Rachel—I will remember the days in the closet always. Keep smiling. Stacy—Talking (& eating) third hour has really been fun. Your smile brightened my day. Scott & photographers—What do you mean, you didn't take the picture? Seriously, you guys have all come to my rescue at a moments notice & I really appreciate it. Ads staff—You guys are the greatest. If I didn't have you to scream at, I would've gone crazy. NEVER TRUST A PHOTOGRAPHER!! Jay—You've been so dependable. Thanks for putting up w/ us SENIORS! Good luck next year. John—I could always count on you to have everything done on time, and I'm really grateful for all of your extra effort. Michelle—I shouldn't have worried. You are extremely talented. Decide what you want and then go for it!! Thanks for being my friend.

Alisa Attardi

Advertising Editor

Heritage Heroes— I have been told many times, by many people, that this editor business is the most thankless job on earth. I agree. But if it were not for the people I have had the pleasure to work with this year, it would be all for nought. You have all made this job and myself seem worthwhile. I thank you all. Mrs. Barber—Thank you for all your faith in my ideas. I cannot think of something that won't sound cliched, so all I can say is a heartfelt "thank you".

Rachel—From Mrs. Harp to Hurwitz, we've had our trials. Thanks for making them fun along the way. Jenny—Seventh hour was always interesting to say the least. K-State is still a bunch of hicks, but I do have Raider pride! Alisa—You put up with a lot that you shouldn't have. You are very special to me and always will be. "Group" will always be in my heart. Wob—(our fwearwess weader). How come I never got to spend my weekend with you? Chatting in an airport bar just won't cut it. Keep a check on that temper, punching holes in dorm walls isn't as much fun. Wendy—"Did I ever tell you that you were gay?" Say farewell to Stymie, Rhonda, Tiffany and all our faves. You were great. Keep up the silly stuff. Jennifer—We both taught each other a lot this year and I thank you for it. Take care and good luck next year! Bon soir, mes amie.

Student Life Editor

To the Editors: I am really happy that we were all able to work together. You are some of the most creative, intelligent and talented people I know. Rob—I know that many years from now, I will still remember the guy with a faded blue jean jacket and snip and clip haircut who always gave me a bite of his jello at lunch. Thanks for being such a good, patient friend. A question which should never be overlooked by future Editors when choosing a new staff: "Would you be willing to give up your . . . your . . . your . . . !" Lisa—PARK! And whatever you do, don't forget the paper plates. Jenny—Very rarely does one come across a person whose ideas and opinions are so clearly thought out. You always remained level-headed, even when things seemed incredibly hectic. That's what set you apart from the rest and that's what will lead you to success in the future. Rach and Alisa—You two, thanks for listening to me babble about everything. I'm really glad I could aide with both of you. You two are really special. Always have the confidence to go after what you want, and always go after the best—you deserve no less. Jana—You write some of the brightest stuff (B.S.) I've ever read. Really, your spreads were always outstanding. I love your laugh. Karyn—I have a lot of faith in you. I know you'll do a great job as an Editor next year. Thanks for putting up with me! Mary Beth—Thanks for being you! I'll always remember our 6th hour talks when we probably should have been working on our spreads. It's impossible to say everything—Just know that you are one of my best friends, and I couldn't get along without you! Mrs. Barber—A special thanks to you!

Academics Editor

Heritage is done, and finally we have something to show for our efforts. All the hard work, dedication, and time we put into the book definitely paid off. Combining our talents we were able to capture on paper memories that will last forever. Mrs. Barber—I hope our "Spectrum" makes you proud. You will never know how much all your patience and help was appreciated. Rob—So we didn't have our weekend or the ski trip—what can I say—except—triangles are really stupid. Actually it was a great idea, but then so was the hologram. Thanx for keeping your sense of humor. Even at the worst times you could always make me laugh. Stacey—Remember Academics—choir spread, paper plates, Steve's parking! Thanx for being there when I needed you. Jenny, Alisa, Shanna, Rachel, Scott—Working with you all the past two years has been a great experience. The enthusiasm, creativity, and pride you showed in everything you did was a constant source of encouragement not only to me, but to the entire staff. Liz and Gary—You did a great job!! Thanx for putting up with all my nagging and complaining. I really appreciated all your hard work, even if I didn't always say so. G-good luck as editor next year—you'll do fine. Steve, Blumie, John, MB—You guys are the best, 6th hour wouldn't have been as fun without you. Thanx to the entire staff—you should be proud.

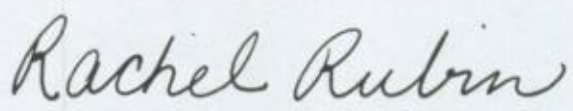
Organizations Editor

The 1986-87 yearbook of Shawnee Mission South has finally been completed. It amazes me how a group of young aspiring adults could create such a fantastic piece of work. I want to thank the other editors and the rest of the staff for making this symbol of youth such a special one. The '86-'87 school year is gone now, but we, the Heritage Staff, have captured the entire year on film, in words, and design. I think we can look back at this year of frustration, long hours of strenuous work, and the panic of deadlines, and truly be proud of ourselves.

Rob—You did a great job. Thanks for putting trust in me. If you don't have anyone to sign your yearbook this year, you can always come to me, and I'll sign it. Photographers—Your work for the year has really impressed me. You all came through for me, and I thank you. David and Jason—Good luck as editors next year. Alisa—I'm sorry that I didn't do more ad pictures (Ha Ha). Thank you for all the hard work and dedication. Why you became ads editor, I'll never know. Mrs. Barber—Thank you for making this such an interesting and special year for me.

Photography Editor

Well editors, the yearbook is finally published, and we can all be proud of the culmination of all our diligence and hard work. Rob—You have been such an understanding editor and a great leader. Thanks for being a good friend, even throughout our "disagreements". Is it too late to print Paul's "explosion" cartoon? Stacey—I'm glad the faculty section "brought us together". Our talks were fun! Shanna—Your section makes the book! I'll always remember the gatherings at your house. Never change!! Carol—It was so amazing having you on the staff and in the three classes. Your work was excellent! Most of all, thanks for being such an understanding friend. Suzanne—I could always count on you for perfect and creative spreads! Good luck next year at B.Y.U. Shawna—Although we got off to a rocky start, you pulled through and did excellent work. Jennifer—Thanks for trying and doing your best. Mrs. Barber—You were the backbone of our yearbook! Thanks for helping me for the past three years. It was always nice talking to you about things other than school! Good luck with next years' staff. A special thanks to Paul Min (who wasn't even on the staff) for volunteering his time to create the cartoons in my section.



Student Body Editor

Heritage '87 is a tribute to all the fun, bad, trying, and confusing times we all encountered during our time in the "Golden Ghetto." I hope you treat it with as much love and care that went into it. Mr. Barber—Your unending patience faith, and encouragement was a major part of our "SPECTRUM". Thank you very much. Rob—BMW Gray, with or without the hologram, was a great idea. You put more time, thought, and love into this book than most, and it is fantastic!!! Shanna—You are my favorite Protestant—who is very bizzarre at times. I still liked the pop-out idea!! Alisa—You had the worst job, but you made the most of it. Congrats, and good luck in the future!! Rachel and Lisa—Your sections look very professional, but what else did I expect? Stacey—Thanks for the hugs, the laughter, and the encouragement. You are great. Scott—What a Stud! Will you go get me a cheeseburger?? John—What do I say to a guy who made my life a living !!? Your sense of humor, though lacking at times, kept 195 alive. Sports did have the best staff, thanks to you and your hard work. I know you will be successful wherever you go to school. P.S.—Al Jones, sr. Linda—Deadlines saw me at my worst, but you always pulled me through. You will be missed the most next year because of all the memories we've had for the last two. Call me if you need a headline. I'll always be there to listen. Good Luck!! . . . and Raiders we ever shall be!!! All the best . . .

Looking back at a year of change

We made the transition...

It happened every year. There was no use in trying to prevent it, for it was inevitable. By early May, and with summer in sight, even the most diehard teachers and students found their thoughts turning away from the present to reflect on the past year.

The faculty was once again settled down after a year of reorganization which saw them moving to new buildings. They looked forward to focusing on their teaching rather than worrying about where it was to be done.

The freshmen were able to look back at their involvement and take pride in their accomplishments as the first freshmen class to attend South.

But more importantly, we could look back as a school and see that we made the transition. We adapted to the crowds and changes realizing that a freshmen class added a new dimension. A dimension both beneficial and welcomed as it provided a stronger base for our athletics, clubs, theater and nearly every other aspect of student activity.

However, student activity was fueled by more than merely an addition of students.

KSMS arranged to have KY102 broadcast their morning show from South. We heard other students and teachers be interviewed, discuss fashion trends and even take part in the reading of the hallowed Max Attack Pack.

Super Fan John Bartel kept us rowdy at varsity basketball games with his unrelenting spirit and cult-like following. Super Fan and his followers even received a boost from Shawnee Mission East. East's nationally known faux paus of unknowingly using a Mercedes symbol instead of a peace sign on a banner, prompted many Raiders to paint their faces with similar symbols at a big basketball victory against East.

The first year of a new era in Shawnee Mission came to an end. '86-'87 seemed to possess a little of everything, enveloping South in a wider spectrum.

...while collecting a spectrum of memories

MARK KAHLER, BOB Bettis, John Jacobs, Randy Flagler, Rob Wheat and Mike Brandt, srs., show off the peace/Mercedes symbols which made Shawnee Mission nationally known.
